Dr. Essie McKoy accepted into Urban Superintendents Academy

The AASA/Howard University Urban Superintendents Academy is a collaboration between these two internationally known and recognized leadership organizations to prepare individuals for certification and success in urban and increasingly diverse suburban settings. The partnership is also designed to expand the pool of underrepresented superintendent groups.

"Through its relevant and rigorous program, the Urban Superintendents Academy prepares a new generation of school superintendents who are committed to all school children actualizing their potential," said Leslie T. Fenwick, dean, Howard University School of Education. "This unique partnership between AASA and Howard University provides an exceptional opportunity for those who wish to become leaders in urban school systems," said Daniel A. Domenech, executive director, AASA. "Combining on site learning experiences, mentors, strong curriculum, affinity groups, an annual conference and ongoing support, the Urban Superintendents Academy is a leader in preparing superintendents."

The Academy will offer prospective and in-service superintendents a revolutionary new approach to ensuring success in urban settings. The program will offer professional development, clinical field experiences and a range of resources to prepare for success for these superintendents.

Dr. McKoy will complete her studies on the campus of Howard University in Washington, DC and looks forward to learning from some of the most progressive superintendents throughout the nation.

Miller and Alice Allen celebrate 55 years of marriage

Miller and Alice Allen were united in matrimony on September 3, 1960, at Union Mission Church, Winston-Salem. Both were born in the same year and in the same city, their daughter, Debra A. Pankey, says. They met at Dreamland Park Baptist Church, where Alice was one of the lead soloists. Her voice mesmerized Miller and he was determined to get to know her. He succeeded. Two children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild have come from their union.

Miller retired from the former Duke Power Company in 1993 after 34 years of service. Alice retired from the WS/FC Schools system in 1996 with 30 years of service. They continue to volunteer with various organizations. They are members of the YMCA, serve their church in various capacities and love gardening and spending time with family.

Their children and grandchildren threw a big 50th anniversary party in 2010. This year, the Allens enjoyed a more quiet celebration with dinner a movie.

Arts Council launches Power2Give

The Arts Council is creating an opportunity for donors to directly support two new initiatives - "Art in Unexpected Places" and "Early Childhood and After School Enrichment."

Jim Sparrow, Arts Council President and CEO, said, "Art in Unexpected Places" offers the opportunity to give dollars that will increase the amount of public art, performances and cultural experiences in the city while providing support for the community's talented artists.

"Early Childhood and After School Enrichment" expands the arts-in-education efforts outside the school room and school day and provides additional venues where children can enhance their learning through the arts in safe and stimulating environments."

As of Sept. 1, videos on the Power2Give website, YouTube and The Arts Council website, www.intot-hearts.org, will give insights into each initiative.
