Youth missionaries compete in a Bible Bowl at the Forsyth County Missionary Union monthly meeting on Sunday, Oct. 25.

Missionary Union uses Bible Bowl to teach

BY TIMOTHY RAMSEY
FOR THE CHRONICLE

When the Forsyth County Missionary Union met for its monthly meeting, it was full of questions.

The highlight of the meeting was the Bible Bowl, which matched youth from different churches against one another in a Jeopardy-style quiz game.

The winner of the event on Sunday, Oct. 25 at Friendship Missionary Baptist Church was the host church of Friendship Baptist. The Bible Bowl has been an annual part of the Missionary Union for over 25 years.

"It was a great event, everyone took a positive message, and learned a lot about Jesus," said Youth Missionary President James Huntley.

He said he wanted to become president of the Youth Missionary Union "because it's a positive organization that deals with kids my age and younger, and I've seen the officers and they seem to be great role models for youth trying to make a positive change in the world."

Joycelyn Johnson, who was the moderator for the Bible Bowl said, "We looked at ways to try and encourage the young people to do team building, assist with conflict resolution, and more importantly to help with the opportunity to do religious Christian development."

The seniors competed in their own Bible Bowl competition. Mars

Hill Baptist Church was the winner. "We encouraged the seniors to work along with the young people and to get them to think outside of the box," said Johnson about the Bible Bowl.

The Missionary Union is made up of individuals from Baptist churches throughout Forsyth County. The union fellowships with one another, and are involved with missions within individual churches and the community, as well as philanthropic endeavors throughout Forsyth County. They are also connected with the Lott Carey Foreign Mission, which held its annual convention at the Koury Convention Center in Greensboro in August.

The meeting commenced with the

Family conference to bring a host of speakers

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

Bethlehem Missionary Baptist Church, 1711 N. Claremont Ave., will have its family conference on Saturday, Nov. 14 from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. The theme will be, "Families Destined for Greater: How to Win at Life."

The purpose is to provide families with tangible steps, knowledge, inspiration, aspiration, motivation and tools to improve the quality of their lives. The focus will be on spiritual, social, educational and economic aspects, based on the given theme.

There will be sessions for the youth (middle and high school students), young adults (college students) and adults. There will also be activities for kids.

"The conference is designed to make a real impact on our community," said Pastor Dwight Hash. "We hope that everyone will come so that we can all benefit together, and take information we gain into our homes, our churches, our community for the betterment of all of us."

A host of speakers are in attendance to deliver keynote addresses. Certain guest speakers like Dr. Anthony Evans, president and CEO of National Black Church Initiative of Washington, D.C.; Judge Denise Hartsfield, District Court judge of the 21st District; Councilman James Taylor Jr., of the Southeast Ward; and WXII News Anchor Margaret Johnson are among the few that are expected.

A $10 donation will cover the cost of all meals that will be served, gift registration bags and participation in all sessions of the conference. Registration can be online and at the door.
