

Documentary depicts grieving people who build a Habitat house

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

"Labor of Love: The Healing Build," a short documentary about grieving individuals coming together to build a Habitat for Humanity house for a family in Winston-Salem, will air on WUNC-TV at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 3.

"Labor of Love," written and produced by Stone's Throw Films, chronicles the experience of a group of volunteers who built the first Healing Build House in 2013. Laura Hart McKinny, vice president of Stone's Throw and member of the screenwriting faculty at UNC School of the Arts, said she and her family had been helped by Hospice & Palliative Care Center and wanted to give back by making the film.

A collaboration between Hospice and Habitat for Humanity of Forsyth County, the initial Healing Build offered 170 volunteers who had lost loved ones an opportunity to experience a tangible, uplifting and hopeful way to process their grief alongside others with similar experiences.

Among those interviewed in the documentary are Donna Hampton, director of grief and bereavement services for Hospice, and Sylvia Oberle, executive director of Habitat Forsyth. Both share openly about their own personal experiences losing a stepson and son, respectively.

A second Healing Build House was built in 2014, and Habitat Forsyth is currently building partnerships for a third.

More information about the Healing Build project is available by contacting Pam Anglin, Habitat's director of resource development, at 765-8854, ext. 138 or pam.anglin@habitatforsyth.org.

LESSON

one thing and doing another, for their hypocrisy. Jesus acknowledges their authority and knowledge of the Mosaic Law, but he tells the crowd to obey their teaching of the law. He also tells them to not follow their example of obeying it. Jesus accuses the scribes and Pharisees of seeking approval of others. They were more concerned with the outward appearance of being religious in the way they dressed for morning prayers with cases on their foreheads and left arms near the heart. They sought public recognition as "Rabbi" (vs.7). Jesus warns not to seek recognition of others and to only refer to God the creator as "Father" to all believers. He taught humility and pointed out that "Indeed God would humble those who tried to make themselves great. Oppositely, He would honor those who genuinely humbled themselves (vs23:12) (David C. Cook Bible Lesson Commentary).

Jesus points out true piety while observing people giving their offerings to the "temple treasury" (Mark12:41). While the rich gave what they had to spare after all other expenses were taken care of for living, the widow whom Jesus points out gives all she owns not keeping any for herself. "By her actions it was clear that she loved God with all her heart, soul, mind, and strength Jesus found joy in watching one true worshipper". (David C. Cook Bible Lesson Commentary).

Life's Application:

In order for us to give daily with Godly motivation and attitude, we must emulate the widow. We should have a spirit of total dependence on God and remember that He loves a cheerful giver and the more generously and cheerfully we give, the more our giving is recognized by God. We should also keep in mind that God is a rewarder according to the spirit that works in us. I personally have found that it is truly more blessed to give than to receive. I also enjoy the admonition of James 1:22. Read it.
