with emotion while speaking about her faith. She went on to say that all God wants us to do is pray for the forgiveness of our sins and that he doesn't want us to save anyone because we do not have the power to do so, and as long as she has strength in her bones and breath in her lungs, she will walk in the name of Jesus.

"I participated today because I was called to do so," said Marshalla Sitton, who also participated in the walk. "I think in these days in the political climate we are under, we must come together as a unit, as a body in Christ as directed by his word. For me just walking the city and praying for peace and unity for all of the residents of the city and show nonbelievers that God is real is a wonderful thing and everyone that God needed to be here was here today, and for that I give Him glory."

While most were participating in the prayer walk, a few individuals did stay behind in the "Prayer Tent" which was set up for individuals who could not walk, or anyone just walking past to come by and just have someone pray for them while the group was walking.

Apostle Gloria Samuels of Great Commission Community Church was one of the individuals in the prayer tent and she stated she believes if you are going to birth anything worthwhile, it has to come through prayer. If you can't love people, you can't have a relationship with God or whomever you worship and that's what this walk is all about.

Following the walk, the participants were treated to good music and the fellowship of others while they braved the elements in the name of Jesus.
