Bishop Marshall, lead pastor of Christ Cathedral Church of Deliverance, said this is not a church program but something his family felt passionately about and wanted to make a difference. Because of the three generations of professional gentlemen raised in the Marshall homes, they will be the face of the program.

The eight-week program will run during the first semester of the academic year for Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Schools and will run from Sept. 19 until Nov. 7. Throughout the program there will be principles taught from the Bible. Bishop Marshall will also relate biblical stories and contexts to show the young men the proper way to carry themselves and handle adverse situations, for example. The mission is to not overwhelm the young men with religious tones in fear of having them shut down, but to present them with parallels from the Bible to make certain points.

During the program, the young men will receive assistance in academic pursuits, seminars to enhance their cultural respect, ways to dress appropriately and forums on current events, to name a few. The participants in the program will be referred to as "fellows" because the Marshall Foundation looks to make this an annual event. It hopes to follow up with them after the program concludes, also.

"There will be classes on social etiquette because some equate that as being weak or bougie when it is just what's a part of what makes one successful. We will have classes and seminars and taking the young men to different environments where they will be exposed to other segments of society. There are young people who don't know what's out there on the west side of town past the mall. I think its part of our responsibility to expose them. Exposure births expectations, and we want them to know the neighborhoods where they might not know a person now, but they themselves may one day live in the future," Bishop Marshall said.

Marshall Foundation Executive Director Brittani Lane said relationship building is going to play a major role with the young men. She says they will encourage the mentors in the program to continue the positive relationships with the young men after the program is over to show them that they care and have a role model to look up to.

According to Bishop Marshall, fraternities from local universities have shown strong interest in being mentors to the young men. He said that kind of relationship building is a strong example of brotherhood the young men need to be exposed to.

Parents are not exempt from participating in the program as well. They are expected to encourage the young men to attend all sessions of the program and to reinforce the principles in the home that are being taught in the classes.

Any potential "fellow" within the target age range will be eligible for the program. The foundation is also looking for local professionals and college students to serve as mentors as well. The target is to have 20 to 25 fellows in the program. Registration for the program started June 1 and ends July 31.

To find out more information on the program you can visit the website at marshallfamilyfoundation@gmail.com or contact Brittani Lane at 843-312-2417.

Jehovah's

Jehovah's Witness Robert Green of Thomasville said, "Our convention is a spiritual brotherhood, and it brings all the brothers and sisters together. You really get to enjoy the Bible courses they provide and how it brings out how Jehovah connects people together. All the things the Bible teaches you is a blessing from Jehovah, and it helps you in your everyday life, so that you can love others as you love yourself."

The convention has been held in Winston-Salem since the mid-90s. Kennerley stated the convention continues to come back to Winston-Salem because the people of the city have been very open and welcoming to them.

The first two weekends of the convention will be in English. They expect over

9,000 people during each of those weekends. The following two weekends will be spoken in Spanish because of the growing

Kennerley

Latino population in the faith. Kennerley also said there are conventions such as these all across the country and the world as they try and attract people from all walks of life.

"The purpose is to bring together the brothers and sisters," said an attendee who wished to be referred to as "David." "No matter what someone's race, creed, or color everyone here is united. The convention really shows our way of life and how we can be loyal to Jehovah God."

from Him to worshipping things and idols (vs. 21-22). A decision to live morally upright is needed to follow God. God requires obedience to His word and because the Roman church chooses to ignore Him and do what pleased them they were given over to a reprobate mind (vs. 28). Paul lists the depravities that they were guilty of as an example of their state of mind ... not as an entire list. The acts of depravity in Paul's list are prominent even in our society today. Read verses 29-31... it all seems so contemporary; especially verse 30 ... inventors of evil things (KJV) and ...they invent new ways of sinning (NLT). Sadly, they know as we do today, that these things are wrong and will result in judgment from God, but they continue and even encourage others (vs. 32). UMI sums it up: This had become a concert of sin; they practiced, performed and then applauded (UMI Annual Commentary 2015-16, Precepts for Living).

For Your Consideration: Is more required of us than just acknowledging God's revelation? What really constitutes a mind of reprobation?

Life's Application:

People or we have an innate awareness of God's existence today, yet many of us refuse to submit to His will. The news highlights our refusal daily with mass murders, the continued fight for same-sex marriage and most ridiculously of late, the fight over who goes to what bathroom. We acknowledge that this is indicative of a lost people. We also acknowledge that the Gospel is God's power to change people and give them eternal life. The message of the Risen Christ is the only message that can offer eternal hope and peace to the lost. Forgiveness is found in the belief in Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.
