Ujima CDC seeks tenants for retirement village

BY TODD LUCK
THE CHRONICLE

Ujima Community Development Corp. (CDC) is trying to get deposits from 40 potential tenants before it can start construction of Emmanuel Retirement Village.

Ujima held an informational meeting on Monday, June 27, at The Enterprise Center, where the CDC is located. Ujima's Hobart Jones told attendees the CDC has planned a quality retirement community for those age 62 and over.

"You want something you're going to be proud of," said Jones.

The CDC began in 2005, after Emmanuel Baptist Church Pastor John Mendez had the idea of putting a retirement community on property the church owned on Barbara Jane Avenue. The location of the project in East Winston and the 2008 recession stalled the project.

Ujima finally found funding this year when the city approved $2.5 million for it in April. New Bridge

Bank is offering a $3.2 million loan if the CDC can get 40 deposits of $500

from those interested in living in the retirement community.

Ujima's Larry Weston

said this was a good deal for the CDC, requiring it to only have to raise

$200,000 for the project,

since developers are usually asked to contribute far more equity for a project of this size. The deposits will go in an escrow account and can be returned at any time if the potential tenants change their mind. The CDC is hoping to reach its goal before the end of August, so it can begin construction this year and open it late next year or in early 2018.

Emmanuel Retirement Village will have 28 single bedroom units in a two story apartment building, and duplexes with 22 two-bedroom units and a community center. A one bedroom, one bathroom unit including utilities is $899 and a two bedroom, two bathroom unit including utilities and a garage is $950.

"There are no independent living units of this quality in this kind of setting in East Winston," said Weston.

Some expressed interest but no checks were written among the few that came at the beginning of the drop-in information session.

Already the CDC has five deposits and expects that number to climb to at least 13 by week's end when they're able to get in touch with interested Emmanuel congregates. The CDC will be following up with those who've expressed interest.

Jones said he believed it was a project that will sell itself.

Honor Your Father recognizes outstanding fathers, gives some advice

SPECIAL TO THE CHRONICLE

On Saturday, June 18, on the eve of Father's Day, about 80 people came out between noon and 2 p.m. to pay tribute to fathers and give advice to young boys during the Honor Your Father program.

Ben Piggott, Senior Center Supervisor, and the Father and Son Committee members Darius Kyser, Leroy Richardson, Jr., Robin Jackson, William "Rock" Bitting, Yusuf Suggs, Ralph Meadows, Brian Manns, Mark Redd, Cedric Moser, Leroy Richardson, Sr., Alberto W. Lorenzo, Brian Leak and Jock Bitting, honored fathers with awards.

Those honored were Richard Rowell, Issac Todd, Daniel Piggott, Sr., Olan Shuler and Alfred Poe for contributions and outstanding fathers.

Richard Rowell was an outstanding volunteer at Carver Sr. High School and community worker for young people.

Issac Todd was the first black engineer to integrate R.

J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. He is a Deacon at Shiloh

Piggott

Coach Poe

Baptist Church and was a role model for children in the Bowen Park Community as a lawn mower repairman.

Daniel A. Piggott, Sr., was an outstanding math teacher, basketball coach and baseball coach at Atkins High School and was named principal of the year at Carver Sr. High School by the Winston-Salem Forsyth County School System as a role model for the youth.

Olan Shuler was an outstanding basketball coach at North Forsyth Sr. High School who won many championship games. He was well known as father to all of his players who played for him. He was so good that they named the gym floor in his name.

Alfred Poe was an outstanding basketball coach at Carver Sr. High School, an outstanding alumni at William Penn Sr. High School, and a tennis star also. He was a father to many of his basketball, football and track stars that were at Carver Sr. High School. The new gym at Carver is named after Alfred Poe.

The speaker for the program was author and youth activist Leroy Richardson, Jr.

Tiffany Williams, MPH, MLS, (ASCP) PM Project Coordinator spoke to the parents and young people about being "active and healthy" and going to the doctor and knowing your health status.

Alberto W. Lorenzo, Forsyth County Coroner, brought knowledge to the youth and parents and the history of the coroners in the city.
