Franklin Vagnone Named President of Old Salem Following National Search

Old Salem Museums & Gardens' Board of Trustees named Franklin Vagnone as the 11th president of the 66-year-old institution. The institution includes the Historic Town of Salem, the Museum of Early Southern Decorative Arts and the Gardens at Old Salem. Old Salem announced earlier in the year, the retirement of Ragan Folan who had served as president and Chief Executive Officer since Feb. 1, 2012. Vagnone will officially start full-time on March 1, 2017, but will work with Folan and Old Salem Chief Operating Officer Anthony Slater during a transition period beginning immediately. Vagnone is an internationally renowned thinker, writer and consultant in the fields of historic preservation and museums. Vagnone is best known as the co-author of "The Anarchist's Guide to Historic House Museums," a best-selling influential book on creative approaches to presenting the past.

UNC the Black Pioneers Project

N.C. actress and director, Fay Hauser-Price, known as Fay Hauser, was a guest-performing artist on The Black Pioneers Project at the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill. Hauser, a well-known actor from "Roots," "The Young and the Restless," "Good Times," "ER," "Glee" and "Akeelah and the Bee," was one of the early minority students admitted to the University. The Process Series in partnership with the Southern Oral History Program presented The Black Pioneers Project. It consisted of oral histories of the first African-Americans students who attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The Sonja Haynes Stone Center held performances on Friday, Nov. 4 and Sunday, Nov. 6. Over the past year, Southern Oral History Program interns interviewed members of the "Black Pioneers," the earliest African American students at UNC those attending between 1952 and 1972. The piece was developed from personal accounts as related in recorded interviews and then woven together in performance. Many actors featured in the performance were UNC alumni.
