Downtown salon offers unique setting

The Style Bar by Jennifer Kaye provides energy

THE CHRONICLE

Downtown Winston-Salem has more than a dozen restaurants and bars, over a dozen stores and places to shop, several luxury hotels and apartments, and countless family attractions, but there is only one Style Bar.

Neatly tucked away in the 100 block of West Fourth Street, The Style Bar by Jennifer Kaye is unlike any other salon in the area. And it's new to downtown, having opened last month.

Complete with chandelier-like light fixtures and an excellent view of the downtown skyline from a roof-top patio, the salon resembles what you would expect to see in big cities like Los Angeles, New York or Paris.

Salon owner and local hair guru Jennifer Galloway said that when she was looking for a location for her seventh salon and came across prime real estate in the growing downtown area, she knew it was the perfect spot.

"It's very exciting to walk downtown and see all the new businesses, and it feels good to be a part of that growth the area has seen in recent years," said Galloway. "With all the young people drawn to the area, I think more and more business owners are starting to down size and move downtown."

When asked what sets the Style Bar apart from other salons in the area,

Galloway said, "I think it's the energy. Unlike some of the other salons, we have a relaxed environment."

"When I was putting everything together, I wanted to bring a fun party feel, and I think we've accomplished that," she continued. "There are a lot of great salons in the area, but many are dark and don't have much energy, so I wanted The Style Bar to be fun and inviting. My biggest thing was to create positive energy."

The Style Bar by Jennifer Kaye will also serve as the official production and distribution center for Teulu, Galloway's very own line of beauty products.

The salon can also be rented to host birthday parties, wedding parties, and other events.

Galloway admits, turning the old building into a state-of-the-art salon wasn't an easy task but, with the help and support from the downtown community, everything fell into place.

"The support has just been great," she said. "Although it was tough trying to configure all of the plumbing and bring the building up to date, everything came together in the end."

"We had so many people who wanted to donate and help. It feels good to know that you have the support of the community around you."

The Style Bar by Jennifer Kaye is open by appointment only on Monday; from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday; from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday; and open for reservations only on Sunday.

Recreation center's annual bingo game helps families in need

BY TIMOTHY RAMSEY
THE CHRONICLE

The Thanksgiving season is upon us, and it's time for the turkey and all the trimmings. For some families, a Thanksgiving meal is not a given. To help families in need, the Carl H. Russell St. Recreation Center held its annual "Bingo for Turkeys" on Friday night, Nov. 18.

The center has held this event for the past 23 years. It was sponsored by Winston-Salem Recreation and Parks, Carver Senior Citizens Club, 30th district class of Prince Hall Masons, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Food Lion and Swing Phi Swing Social Fellowship.

Carl Russell director Ben Piggott says this event started while he was the director at the William C. Sims recreation center and has grown year after year. To participate, the only requirement is to bring three canned goods per player. Those canned goods in turn will be donated to Second Harvest Food Bank.

"This program is to bring the community and folks outside of the community in for a chance to win food and help others that are in distress by donating canned goods," Piggott said. "This came out of people wanting to give to other people. Many folks need help during the Thanksgiving holiday, and everybody deserves the right to eat."

"Food Lion, along with my good friend Garland Scarborough, have made a major contribution. Food Lion has been giving to this program since I was at Happy Hill. Food Lion really believes in reaching out to people and giving to folks in need."

There were 23 turkeys, 14 chickens, nine Cornish hens and four hams that were up for grabs during the bingo night. It was a nice turnout from those in the community trying to win food for the holiday.

One of the winners of a turkey, Bernice Whitley, said "It's a great experience that the recreation center is having for us, and I'm very appreciative to have won a turkey tonight."

Another winner, Tahara Moore, added "This is my first time attending this event, and I'm very excited to have won the turkey because it's something I could really use, since this is my first Thanksgivings back at home in nine years."

Piggott and the staff from the rec center wanted to thank all of those that helped put the event together, such as the Turner family, Anderson High School Class of 1969, Jamie Wilkes Trophies and Awards, Carl H. Russell Sittercise class, Ronald Cauthen, Torry Myers, Terry Myers, Jean Allen, Dottie Jordan and the Winston-Salem Chronicle.

Prince Hall Mason John Lewis said, "First and foremost, I used to work here at Carl Russell and I have seen the kids coming here and not wanting to go home because they have no food to go home to, so it's all about me giving as much as I can, whether it be time or money, if need be. It's been instilled in me since I was a kid to always help others as much as possible."

William Royston, director of Recreation and Parks of Winston-Salem, said it's great when people have small ideas and they develop into things much greater that impact the community. He commended the staff members at Carl Russell for their tireless commitment to helping the community.
