In the preparation of these very superior and encyclent Pills, no cost or trouble is apared to insure the greatest possible degree of perfection point of utility, excellence and comfort. They contain one article which has probably never before been used as a medicine, and which is a powerful agent in cleanaing the Liver (which gives them an advantage over every other Pill heretofore offered to the public.) The composition used in these Pills is enrefully prepared by the hand of the discoverer, and may be used by the most feeble patient in the most delicate situation, either male or female; and from their peculiar combination are highly strengthening, mild in their action on the howels, and indeed, in a climate like ours where colds and coughs are almost an unfalling consequence of the suiden changes to which all are subject, every one at all liable to suffer from the influence of those causes, will find the greatest security in having his liver and howels well cleanased by these invaluable Pills.

Where these Pills are known, especially in the southern States, where they have been acculated so extensively, they need no recommendation—their merits are so well known by their results, which have given them a repution that has brought them into great demand. They therefore are destined to be, at no distant day, the only remedity recognized and used by the people where billous diseases are so prevalent. The advantage in this treatment therefore, is, that a cure must be rairical and complete without the necessity of breaking down the system in one past to remove a disease in another.
