Bond, Lewis To Appear On Strong Show

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - On Sunday, September 24 at 10:30 p.m. WBTV's "The Lester Strong Show" will have as its special guests two of the most prominent Black leaders in America. Julian Bond, the controversial Georgia Legislator, and John Lewis, a prominent Civil Rights leader, will speak on the subject of The Voter Education Project, Inc. and the Black movement of today.

The Voter Education Project, Inc. is a private, non-profit, non-partisan corporation which operates a comprehensive program of voter registration and citizenship education in the eleven southern states.

The purpose of the Voter Education Project is to motivate, register, educate, and encourage total minority involvement in the political arena. It also seeks to compensate in a small measure for the disadvantages inflicted on minority groups as a result of many decades of systematic exclusion from southern politics.

In keeping with the objective of "The Lester Strong Show," that is to bridge the gap between people of varying beliefs and backgrounds, Strong will also have as special guests Dr. Reginald Hawkins, Democrat from Charlotte, and Republican Reverend James Frieson, who will discuss Blacks in the two party system.

The musical segment of the program will feature one of the most exciting young pop-jazz groups to hit the Charlotte area. The group, TOUCH, will perform several popular numbers during the show.
