'Rap' Session

Jack' Jills Ends Successful Program

For a total of eight consecutive Wednesdays, teenagers in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg area engaged in a "Rap" session sponsored by the Charlotte Chapter of Jack and Jill of America, Incorporated.

The program, made possible by a $1,000 grant from the Jack and Jill National Foundation, brought together teens from the various junior and senior high schools in the Charlotte area giving them the opportunity to exchange ideas on the many concerns they face in school, at home and in social groups.

The program, which was coordinated by Joseph C. Champion, director of guidance for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools, included the talents and expertise of some of Charlotte's leading citizens. Included in the group of resource persons were Dr. Kenneth H. Chamber, obstetrician and gynecologist; Rudy Torrence, officer with the Youth Bureau of the Law Enforcement Center; Milledge Brodie, coordinator with the local health department; and Clifton Johnson, Mecklenburg County Judge.

Topics ranged from sex education to drugs to school disruptions to peer pressure to crime.

Odus Rousseau, assistant principal at Independence High School assisted Mr. Champion. Members of the Charlotte Chapter of Jack & Jill were on hand to facilitate the sessions. Darryl Livingston, a recent graduate of Independence High School served as youth coordinator at the program.

Climaxing the weekly sessions, the group was "treated" to an evening out. Approximately 45 of the participants, attended a banquet at Sir George's Restaurant on Sugar Creek Road. A brief program was held and prizes were awarded.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to be paid to the local chapter can be summed up in the words of one of the participants who said, "Why does it have to stop? We'd like to go on the whole year."

Social Welfare Grants Aid Smith Program

The Undergraduate Social Welfare Program of Johnson C. Smith University is a program which is structured to offer students a relevant foundation for the development of effective practice skills for immediate social work employment upon graduation. Aided by C. Dupont Rippey, students in this program receive individualized instruction in an agency setting, a provision in field practice which enables them to utilize the knowledge gained from their broad study curriculum.

Considered to be one of the fastest growing areas in the entire Smith program, the history of its development is filled with success stories. It was initially funded in 1971 for $181,000 which paid tuition, fees and a stipend for eight students in field placement and the salary for one new faculty member.

In April of 1973 the North Carolina Internship Officer made a matching grant of approximately $1,200 to Johnson C. Smith for the purpose of initiating and completing a survey of the elderly in several areas of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg

Fred talks Lamont into letting Grady, an old buddy of Fred's, be a boarder in their home, in order to make a little extra money.

Grady obligingly moves in and immediately there are problems with three people sharing two bedrooms, one bathroom and one refrigerator.
