

Dr. Goodlett Is Workshop Speaker

CHAPEL HILL -- Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett, president of the National Newspaper Publishers Association, and civil rights attorney Julius L. Chambers, president of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, headline a list of newsmakers and newspaper experts participating in the First Annual Conference of the Southeastern Black Press Institute, October 29-30 in the Research Triangle Park, North Carolina.

The Institute is a new research and development center designed to address the needs of Black newspapers in the five states of Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and the District of Columbia. It was created in recognition of the 150th anniversary of the Black Press.

"We hope to strengthen Black communities in the Southeast through cooperative interaction with Black newspapers," said Bernadine Moses, co-director of the project.

Cooperation with Black newspaper editors and publishers in the development of staff is a major concern of the Institute. She said the conference will strongly reflect this concern.

"Thirteen different workshops geared to the problems faced by the Black newspaper and its community are scheduled at the conference," she said.

Workshop topics include advertising and circulation building, photojournalism, advocacy reporting and editing and an issues panel focusing on affirmative action, Southern Africa, full employment and Black political clout.

Another aim of the Institute is to focus academic attention to the Black Press. Accordingly, workshops on curriculum related to the Black press and the historical value of Black newspapers are scheduled.

Participants at the conference are expected to include Black newspaper staff from the service area, academicians and students and community leaders.

The conference site is the Governors Inn, located in the Research Triangle Park on Interstate 40 between Raleigh and Durham. The hotel is 10 minutes away from the Raleigh-Durham Airport. Registration for the conference is $15. Student registration is $10.

The Institute is a demonstration project of the Curriculum in African and Afro-American Studies at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and is funded through a two-year $250,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Additional information about the Institute can be obtained by writing: The Southeastern Black Press Institute, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 412 W. Franklin St., Suite 5, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514. The telephone numbers are: (919) 966-4729 and (919) 966-3182.

Les Dames Contribute

$ 100 To Sickle Cell Anemia

Les Dames Moderne Social Club, in its continued effort to benefit the welfare of the community, recently contributed $100 to the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation.

The Sickle Cell Foundation is but one of the community organizations that receive yearly dividends from the hard and tenacious work of this group. The Terry and Davis fund and an underprived family at Christmas time have witnessed the generosity of this group of women.

One of Les Dames most recent fund raising events was a fashion show and disco held at Tandur Inn. This successful event was possible with the assistance of twelve local models displaying clothes from their personal wardrobes and the mellow tunes spun by Mr. B. the king of the disco.

Offices of Les Dames Moderne are Katie Trapp - President, Lenell Grier - Vice President, Elsie Anthony - Secretary, Janella Horsley - Recording Secretary, Harriet Trapp - Treasurer, Julia Abernathy - Program Planning Committee and Doris Davis - Social Committee.

Workshop Set For Teachers

A meeting of child and family serving agencies and organizations to discuss the Child Find Project is scheduled Thursday, October 13, 10 a.m. - 12 noon in the board room of the Education Center.

Child Find is a new project to locate children in Mecklenburg County who have special needs.

The project involves various public and private agencies working with the school system in identifying children from birth to 21 years of age who have special needs.

The goals of Child Find are: (1) to find all children who are not known to the school system and plan appropriate educational and support services for them if none are presently available.

(2) to plan and implement appropriate educational programs for those children known to the school system and to share information with others

Goodwill Gets $40,000 Grants

Goodwill Industries here in Charlotte announced this week that they have been awarded two federal grants, totaling over $40,000. According to Michael Elder, President of the United Way Member Agency, the money will be used to purchase badly needed vocational testing and job exploration equipment which will enhance Goodwill's Rehabilitation Program.

"Many people do not realize that our primary purpose at Goodwill is to provide training and employment opportunities to the handicapped and disadvantaged," said Mr. Elder. "Collecting donated household items for recycling and repair provides the necessary environment in which an individual can gain successful working skills. The main goal in all of our programs is to place the handicapped and disadvantaged in positions of competitive employment."

Included in the equipment to be purchased is the H.E.S. Testing System which uses sophisticated electronic tests to gather data which is then fed into a computer in Chicago.

The end result is a printout of jobs from the Dictionary of Occupational Titles which provides the counselor and client with information essential to successful job placement.
