

Morehouse College

Be Somebody....Be A Morehouse Man

Dear High School Senior:

One of the most important decisions of your life will be the selection of a college where you will undertake your higher education. You will have to decide whether your college will be weak or strong, vocational or liberal arts, large or small, rural or urban, public or private, predominantly black or predominantly white.

If you are a young man with high professional ambition and deep social commitment, you should seriously consider Morehouse, a college which combines the best of many worlds. Widely regarded as the leading predominantly black college and as one of the outstanding American colleges, Morehouse has

(1) a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa; (2) a curriculum offering degrees in the liberal arts, business, engineering, and teacher education; (3) a Faculty in which two-thirds of the members hold Ph.D. degrees; (4) a Freshman Class in which around 500 members are selected each year from more than 2,000 applicants from all over the United States and many foreign countries; and (5) a first-class campus including ten new buildings constructed since 1970. Being a member institution of the Atlanta University

Center, Morehouse provides a small-college atmosphere in a university complex, gives students the opportunity to take courses at three affiliated colleges without payment of additional tuition and shares one of the finest libraries in the South. Located in Atlanta, Morehouse has access to the cultural and recreational resources of America's most progressive city. Operated by an independent Board of Trustees, Morehouse provides an educational experience designed to develop competent professionals and dedicated leaders. Being a predominantly black college, Morehouse acquaints its students with African and Afro-American culture and seeks solutions to racial problems in this country and abroad.

As a men's college, Morehouse has strong ties with her sister institution, Spelman College, a first-class women's college which is just across the street. Morehouse and Spelman students attend classes together, share social and recreational activities, and appear together in dramatic offerings, forensic groups, glee clubs, marching bands, and cheering squads. The Morehouse Homecoming Queen and her attendants are Spelman women.

While giving primary attention to education and character-building, Morehouse offers a wide range of student organizations including the world-famous Morehouse Glee Club, the student newspaper, the senior yearbook, and departmental and social clubs. Morehouse students also have a well-developed intramural program and compete in six sports in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. In recent years, Morehouse has won SIAC championships in basketball, football and tennis.

Scholarships and other forms of financial aid are available.

Read the following pages, decide if Morehouse is the college for you, and write or call us if you need further information. We hope you will become a Morehouse Man when school opens next August.

Sincerely,
Hugh M. Gloster
President

Morehouse Ranks High

Morehouse is an independent predominantly black four-year liberal-arts college for men. Founded in 1867, the College has an enrollment of more than 1,800 male students and a faculty of more than 100 full-time teachers. Accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, the College operates under the semester system with the school year beginning in late August and ending in mid-May. More than 95 percent of the students are full-time, and about half are housed in college residence halls.

If you check with people who are knowledgeable about American higher education, you will soon discover that Morehouse is widely regarded as the best predominantly black college and as one of the outstanding colleges of the United States.

If you ask why Morehouse has such a good reputation, you will learn that the College is a national symbol of academic excellence and leadership development. Martin Luther King, Jr., Lerone Bennett, Maynard Jackson and Julian Bond are convincing proof that Morehouse is a training ground for men who are competent professionals and able leaders.
