Mrs. Josephine Goodwin Feels She Has Better Chance

By Audrey C. Lodato
Post Staff Writer
Representing Walls Memorial AME Zion Church for the second straight year, Josephine Goodwin is "planning to work even harder" in this year's "Churchwoman of the Year" contest. "I enjoyed it very much last time," the eager churchwoman enthused.

Ms. Goodwin has recruited more committee members this year than she had for last year's contest, so she feels she has a better chance of becoming a winner.

Husband Daniel and daughter Joann Harris are behind her efforts all the way. "They thought it was great and hope I get it this time," the contestant stated. They will be trying to help her achieve her goal. When asked what she'll do if she wins, she replied, "Oh, my goodness! I guess I'd just be surprised—and very pleased!" The spirited church-woman is looking forward to helping her church through her participation in the contest. She is a member of Wall Memorial's Missionary Society, Ladies' Progressive Club, hymn choir, church choir, the Friendly Few Club, and the NAACP.

Ms. Goodwin had nothing but words of praise for her pastor of more than 10 years, the Rev. J. A. White. "He's beautiful," she professed. "He helps me all he can." According to Ms. Goodwin, Rev. White hasn't been well lately, so she wants to be able to help him. When he called on her to participate in this year's contest, she said yes.

Ms. Goodwin, who has subscribed to The Post the past three years, enjoys the paper and is taking advantage of the opportunity to tell others about it.

Jayne Kennedy To Appear At NRBA Meeting

WASHINGTON - Jayne Kennedy former star of television's "Greatest Sports Legends" and sportscaster on "NFL Today," will tape segments of her nationally syndicated morning music exercise show "Radiobics" September 17 during the Radio Convention and Programming Conference (RCPC).

The five-minute radio show airs five days a week and is produced and distributed by Syndicate It Productions, Burbank, Calif., in association with Jayne Kennedy Productions. Syndicate It President Bob Dockery Jr., said, "We are delighted to be a part of this impressive meeting of radio's leading figures."

RCPC will be presented by the National Association of Broadcasters and the National Radio Broadcasters Association September 16-19 at Los Angeles' Bonaventure and Biltmore hotels.

Wachovia Introduces New Credit Service

Wachovia Bank and Trust has introduced a new credit service call Equity BankLine which features lines of credit ranging from $10,000 to $90,000 that are secured by customers' home equity.

The new service is similar to Wachovia's BankLine, an unsecured line of credit which was begun in 1980. Both allow customers to write their own loans up to an established line of credit and offer flexible repayment schedules.

"Many homeowners have accumulated large amounts of equity in their homes due to the rapid escalation of home values over the past few years," said James T. Brewer, executive vice president of retail Banking Administration.

"Equity BankLine provides a convenient and flexible way to tap this asset when needed for major purchases or for such things as educational expenses. Using their home as collateral also makes it possible for customers to qualify for larger credit lines than might be possible on an unsecured basis," Brewer said.

The sizes of the credit lines are determined by customers' creditworthiness and by the equity which has accumulated in the appraised value of their homes.
