Program Examines People In Poverty

Special To The Post
CHAPEL HILL — "People In Poverty," a program examining poverty locally, national and internationally, will be presented March 15-20 at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The program, sponsored by the Campus Y and the Carolina Union, will attempt to increase poverty awareness through a concert, hunger walk, slide show and panel discussion.

Gregory Paul will give a benefit concert Friday, March 15, at 8 p.m. in the Wesley Foundation. A graduate student in the Curriculum in Linguistics at UNC, Paul will play guitar and sing folk songs in five languages. Tickets, available at the Campus Y, are $5. All proceeds, which go to UNICEF, are earmarked for Ethiopian famine victims.

The Walk for Humanity, an annual Campus Y event, will be held Saturday, March 16. Sponsor cards for the 10-mile walk are available at the Campus Y office. Registration will be 9-9 a.m. the day of the walk.

The Women's Health Counseling

Service will receive $140 of the money raised by the walk. The remainder will be divided by Save the Children, for improvement of living conditions on the state's Cherokee reservation; and the Inter-Faith Council, for its loan and grant fund, which provides emergency financial help to local families.

The multi-media slide show, "American Pictures," will be presented Tuesday, March 19, at 7 p.m. in Memorial Hall. During the 1970s, Danish citizen Jacob Holdt traveled more than 100,000 miles across the United States photographing the poverty-stricken. His free, public slide presentation compares the lives of America's rich and poor.

A panel discussion Wednesday, March 20, at 8 p.m. looks at poverty in Chapel Hill. Panelists include state Sen. Wilma Woodard; Jean Wagner, Carrboro Nutrition Site manager; Sue Baker, Inter-Faith Council; and Gloria Williams, director of the Joint Orange-Chatham Community Action Center.

Information on volunteer positions in local human service organizations, as well as addresses for food or clothing donations, will be available. For more information, call (919) 962-2333.
