JUSTICE FOR ALL?

Although they self-righteously proclaim their role in protecting our freedoms, other newspapers arrogantly refused to publish this information. This information concerns corrupt practices in the Mecklenburg Courts. Instead of meeting the responsibilities of a free press, the other newspapers endorsed the chief offender, Eddie Knox, for Governor.

The judges involved had a conflict of interest. On the one hand was their sworn duty to render justice without fear or favor. On the other hand, they naturally were reluctant to oppose a powerful politician who, if he became Governor, could appoint judges to higher office. (He then became patronage adviser to the man who was elected.) Knox has the reputation for ruthlessness, and for rewarding friends and punishing enemies. He seems proud of his reputation for influence peddling. He also seems to enjoy making divorces (including the case at hand) as dirty and expensive as possible. The judges involved had a conflict of interest. On the expensive as possible.

It makes little difference what means were used to improperly influence the judges — money, a cigar, a personal favor or political threat or favor — expressed or implied. The fact is that improper demands were made by or on behalf of Knox and over our protests. these demands were granted by the judges. The issue is justice for all.

Judge Walter H. Bennett: The case was originally scheduled to be heard by Judge Bennett. But the husband's attorney was suddenly hospitalized, and a continuance was asked. Knox's associate, Charles W. Barkley, secretly charged the husband with "starving out" his family. The husband's representation was only a legal secretary. Judge Bennett, without testimony or evidence to support the secret charge, and over the husband's letter of protest, secretly awarded temporary alimony to the wife although the husband was fully supporting his family under his roof. These are very serious violations of the husband's right to a fair and honest trial.

Judge Chase Saunders: Judge Saunders ignored the wife's marriage fraud — which she never denied (and which should have relieved the husband of alimony)—and under Knox's pressure awarded alimony beyond the husband's ability to pay. Saunders also awarded Knox's attorney's fees, although Knox had publicly stated that he was representing the wife free of charge. Judge Walter H. Bennett: The case was originally stated that he was representing the wife free of charge.

Judge L. Stanley Brown: The recession caused the husband to lose all his income. Knox's associate, husband to lose all his income. Knox's associate, Robert Hinson, made no effort to negotiate an adjustment in alimony and child support, which an honest and ethical attorney would do. Instead, he sued, charging willful non-support. Brown ignored the law which provided for an adjustment under these circumstances. Also, Brown agreed that the wife's income exceeded the husband's. The practical effect was that the husband was required to pay 94 percent of his 1983 income in alimony and child support — and most of this income was Social Security.

North Carolina Court of Appeals: The Court of North Carolina Court of Appeals: The Court of Appeals side-stepped the true issue - the husband's ability to pay - and upheld Brown on procedural grounds. Naturally, the Appeals judges hope that a Governor will appoint them to the Supreme Court when

North Carolina Supreme Court: The Supreme Court refused to review the case despite the husband's attorney's plea-,

"Where the 63-year-old husband loses all his income and his wife has a gain of net monthly income from and his wife has a gain of net monthly income from zero to $460 and where the husband is borrowing an increased amount of money each month to pay his living expenses, he should not be left remediless by the judicial system. Reducing payments temporarily with the provision that the amount of the reduction shall be paid as a lump sum payment at a future date is not appropriate remedy especially in light of Plaintiff's age, declining health and declining prospects for later increasing his income." increasing his income."

After the Supreme Court refused to review the case, the husband wrote to the wife. He explained his the husband wrote to the wife. He explained his precarious financial situation and his burden of caring for a disabled daughter. He explained that further malicious efforts to financially ruin him and destroy his health would in the end hurt their small child.

The wife's response was to sue to collect. An hour after the Sheriff's Deputy served papers, the husband went to the hospital with a heart attack.

Judge William G. Jones: Although the husband had been assured that the hearing would be continued upon presentation of a letter from his cardiologist, Judge Jones proceeded without him. The husband was thereby denied the opportunity to present the financial records demanded and to show that under the circumstances he could be in debt from the divorce for the remainder of his life. The husband denies that "at all times...he possessed the financial means" to pay the money demanded.

all times...he possessed the financial medical the money demanded.

Despite great hardship, the husband was forced to pay or lose his home and livelihood. And the medical expense from the heart attack added to his debt.

Knox so lusts for power that he even acted against the interests of the small child he pretended to represent. Every attorney and judge knows that you do not support a child by destroying the father's estate. Any insurance agent should know this, too. Taking 90 percent of the father's income — mostly Social Security and place his estate.

percent of the father's income - mostly Social Security - cripples his estate.

In maliciously making the divorce filthy, Knox destroyed the father-child relationship. To protect his disabled other child, and to take the wife's profit out of ruining the father, the father has reluctantly disinherited his small child.

The cause of the divorce was marriage fraud to avoid deportation. This is a sin which profanes the marriage wows and is as serious as infidelity if not more so. And this should have relieved the husband of any alimony

The issue is justice for all -- not justice only for the powerful. The time has come to disbar Knox, censure the judges, take the courts from the politicians, and restore the courts to the people.
