Politics Of White Flight

A reported relatively small poll taken in a single state, Michigan, where racial polarization is said to be pronounced, has surfaced from the closet a skeleton that Democratic Party officials would have preferred to not talk about publicly.

The skeleton, in the form of a pollster's conclusion, says that many recent defectors from the Democratic Party, nearly all of them white people, are leaving because they think that federal domestic programs - largely supported by Democrats - are designed to favor benefiting blacks as opposed to whites.

The pollster claims that "Democratic defectors have very deeply felt racial sentiment that are formative as to their views of government and the Democratic Party." Stanley Greenberg, the pollster, reports too that many of the defectors surveyed are believed to be blue collar workers who have left the Democratic Party only out of a feeling that government is not doing enough for them, not for reasons of philosophical convictions.

The entire issue - white flight from the national Democratic Party - is believed to be creating a dilemma for Democrats. The dilemma is even more pronounced when the fact is noted that blacks have been the Democratic Party's most loyal constituency, and have expectantly sought to be duly rewarded.

Ironically, but not surprisingly, the poll reportedly indicates it is not so much an anti-black feeling as it is that blacks just happen to be the group blocking blue collar white Americans from getting small busi-ness loans; job promotions blocked by affirmative action programs and other government assistance.

Finally, some state Democratic Party chairmen have indicated that similar results would be evident in their states with the same survey.

Mixed Signals?

Based on the reported aspects of the poll's findings, mixed signals as to the full meaning of the survey occur when some factors are considered that may have influenced the attitudes and responses of those surveyed. For example, Michigan, a major automobile producing state that has felt the impact of competition from foreign auto makers, has had serious unemploy-ment problems over the last decade. Coupled with this is that self-pride has led many such jobless auto workers to decline federal assistance when it has been available.

White people generally are more inclined to decline government assistance for reasons of pride and the psychologic to believe that makes them somehow better than black people. Blacks are no less a people of pride and dignity; however, because of years, hopefully all in the past, of institutionalized racism and limited educational opportunity, they have had to develop coping and survival skills in order to achieve any level of a quality of life. efforts have of necessity included utilizing and taking advantage of federal government assistance programs. Detroit, Michigan, one of the major cities in the nation where affirmative action among policemen and firemen aimed at greater advancement for minorities and women is quite controversial, undoubtedly was in the minds too of those surveyed. On the other hand, the Republic Party has begun its long awaited effort to recruit cross-over Democrats to their party. Ironically, one of the first Democrats they were successful in recruiting was William Lucas, Detroit area county executive. Lucas, a black man and a former New York City policeman and FBI agent, said the Democratic leadership is out of touch with the people.

Lucas, 57, is the manager of Wayne County - the nation's fourth largest county said, amid rumors that he'll run for governor next year against Gov. Jane Blanchard, "Simply changing parties does not automatically make me a candidate for governor."

Racial Feelings

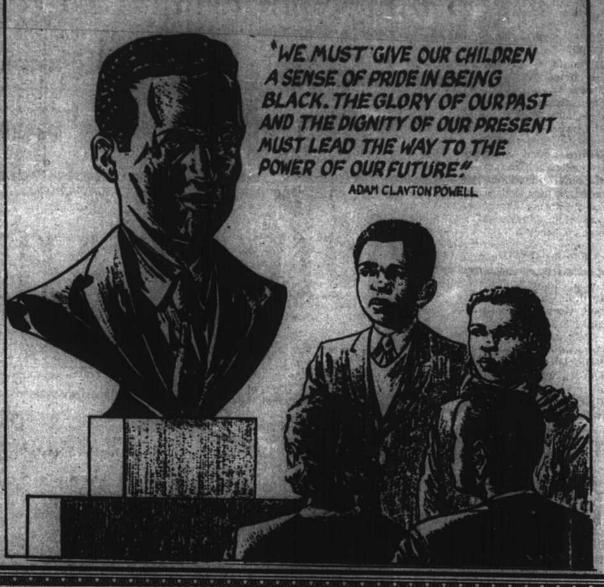

After serving four terms as sheriff, Lucas gained 77 percent of the general election vote after winning twice as many votes as his closest Democratic rival in the county executive primary. If Mr. Lucas' success has any significance it sounds as if Michigan is not necessarily a state with overt racial feelings of hostility towards blacks. This too then might indicate that the defection of white Democrats is not a racial issue as such.

Finally, Americans, and particularly the news media have a habit of assuming that every conflict between whites and nonwhites is necessarily a racial conflict and, therefore, have tended to interpret the survey's results as being within a racial hostility situation.

Interestingly, too, since the nation's corporations have had to pay substantially less taxes during the Reagan Administra-tion and received many other benefits, we have to wonder who has benefited most from the federal government.

The Democratic Party certainly needs to rethink its philosophy and general party policies. During the Reagan sweep it appeared that Democrats lacked a sense of direction, were totally ineffective in dealing with the blunt tactics of the likes of Jesse Helms and in general had little to excite the voters.

A HERITAGE TO BE PROUD OF

Controversy Surrounds Contraceptions

This week marks the 25th birthday of the birth control pill. However, controversy and questions still surround this form of contraception. The pill is the third most widely used form of contra-ception in the United States, but much concern of its safety prompts some women to risk conception by re-sorting to some less effective means of birth control.

Approximately 8.5 million to 10 million American women use the pill. The pill has given women the ability to control their reproductive lives and is believed prilives and is believed pri-mary in the quest for real equality. The use of the pill allows women to choose when a child will be con-ceived and when it will not; thus no longer being slaves to their reproductive organs. Controversy has become the primary adjective for the pill: problem being that re-ports are still conflicting.

ports are still conflicting. In the late 1970s studies commented that the pill protects women against infertility caused by sexually transmitted infections. On the flip side doctors recently stated that women who take the pill had two to three times the risk of becoming infertile in comparison to no pill users.

Cancer is another source of concern. Studies in the 1970s linked several types of can-cer to the pill. The 1980s reversed the studies. Today's belief suggest the pill pro-tects against endometrial (lining of the uterus) and ovarian cancer and does not attribute to breast cancer.

that per 100,000 women taking the pill for one year. there will be approximately five pill-related deaths, compared to the 10 deaths related to childbirth per 100,000.

Women also underestimate the effectiveness of the pill. Nearly half of the women studied incorrectly guessed that from five to 20 pregnancies occur for every 100 pill users. The actual rate is one percent to four percent per 100 women, making the pill the most effective contraceptive with a 90 percent efficiency rate. The next effective methods are the IUD and diaphram. Sterilization is another effective method and, of course, the only 100 percent effective method is abstinence.

Thanks to the pill more women are in the workforce, and more are climbing the corporate ladder. This concept has become an important factor in the lives of the female baby boomer generation; it has allowed them the choice of when to conceive and when not. The philosophy of yuppies is spreading -build a profitable and suc-cessful life, then consider having children. Also thanks to the pill, married women are having fewer "unwanted" babies in contrast to their parents who conceived sooner than planned. Due to this fact the proportion of unwanted babies fell from 14 percent of births to married women in births to married women in 1973 to 10 percent in 1982. The conclusion being that the per-centage of "wanted" babies increased from 86 percent to 90 percent. Thus, because of the pill, fewer families are feeling the economic and emotional stress of un-planned births planned births. What about the teen preg-nancy rate? Is it possible that if contraceptive services (especially advocates of the pill) made contraceptives more available to teens without parental notice - would the rate decline? Can the pill be a viable answer by making it an ingredient in orange juice?

It is therefore our conclusion that defections from the Democratic Party is an issue of economics, not racism. However, with the growing loss of many family farms, bank failures and an import-export policy that is costing too many American jobs, there will probably be a swing back to the Democratic Party in the 1985 off-year elections.

What about heart disease? Doctors now see a risk of heart disease linked to women over 35 who smoke and take the pill. Whereas studies in the 1970s linked heart disease as a risk to all women who take the pill.

Another interesting fact is Happy 25th birthday, pill! You are a quarter of a cen-tury old and have conquered over half of the female po-pulation in the United States. That goes to show that a woman can do anything "she" sets her mind to do! Let the bells ring that women do not have to be mothers if they do not want to be. Finally, women have been freed from the master reproductive organs.

From Capitol Hill The Ball Is In President Ronald Reagan's Court

A HIC DAIL IS By Alfreds L. Madison Special To The Post Marianne Mele Hall, President Reagan's appointed chairman of the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, said in the Senate Judiciary committee questionnaire and in papers filed in the District of Columbia Superior Court in 1982, that she co-authored the Book, "Foundations of Sand." The book says, "American blacks insist on preserving their jungle freedoms, their women, their avoid ance of personal responsibility, and their abhorrence of the work ethnic. Blacks have inherited a different set of aptitudes, values, mores, goals and lifestyles over a period of 10,000 years. When you displace the jungle freedom-types into the Scotland-type environment which is American.

The books also says that social scientists "put blacks on welfare so scientists "put blacks on welfare so they can continue their jungle free-doms of leisure time and subsidized procreation." These are racists statements of the worst kind, being said in the eighties, when one had hoped that this type of overt racism had disappeared. Presidential appointments are usually investigated by the FBI – all aspects of their lives are investi-gated. Questions are: Did Marianne tell them that she co-authored "Foundations of Sands?" If so, did the FBI examine the contents of the "Foundations of Sands?" If so, did the FBI examine the contents of the book? If so, did they feel that the statements of racism qualified her for the $70,000 position that she now holds? What information did the FBI and the White House personnel give the Senate Judiciary Committee for Senate confirmation purposes? Is the Judiciary Committee negligent in not examining the book? Doesn't this require the Senate Judiciary to take a good investigatory look at Mr. take a good investigatory look at Mr.

Alfreda Reagan's appointments before con-firming them? Marianne Mele Hall now says that she only edited the book. Yet, her name is one of the three names that are on the book's cover. The Congressional Black Caucus immediately called a press confe-rence to denounce Ms. Hall's actions and called for her immediate re-moval from office. CBC Chairman Mikey Leland stated, "...the mere admission of association with a pu-blication including statements re-pugnant as those in 'Founda-tions of Sand' is a significant in-dictment of the judgment of a public official and we believe constitutes grounds for Ms. Hall's immediate removal."

The Caucus introduced the Sense of the House Resolution condemning the continued insensitivity of the Reagan Administration in its rela-tionships with minorities of various groups. Leland spoke of appoint-ments to the Education Department who expressed a complete sensitivi-ty to the handicapped, which blamed these people for their un-fortunate conditions, disregard for Jewish people in going to Bitberg, blacks, and that with this presiblacks, and that with this presi-dential trend, he will, likely, accord the same treatment to Hispanics, Asians and the poor. The Resolu-tion says that Marianne Hall's con-nection with the book demonstrates tion says that Marianne Hall's con-nection with the book demonstrates that she is morally unfit for the position of Copyright Royalty Tri-bunal. It states, "Resolved, that it is the sense of the House of Repre-sentatives that the President should immediately remove Marianne Mele Hall from the Copyright Royalty Tribunal." The presentative Don Edwards, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Law, and 56 congressmen wrote the President a letter, calling for Ms. Hall's remov-al. Edwards stated at the press conference that by the end of the day he expected to have 200 sign-ers of the letter. Edwards said that he is appalled at the book, "Black Americans want to continue their jungles American blacks have known are the jungles of slavery, of separate but megual education, of separate but megual education of separate but megual educ

Representative Howard Wolpe aid, "Ms. Hall's own acknowledge-ment she was the editor of the book that espouses views that are so ugly and so racist that surely no Ameri-can President would want to be associated with such views, even for a moment."

Representative Vic Fazio, Chairman of the Legislative Branch of the House Appropriations Committee, which oversees the Copyright Office, said, "Ms. Hall has, for money, helped in the writing of a book that conveys the most scurrilous, back-ward and bigoted ideas against all black Americans. However, this is not an issue for black Americans only. Men and women of good will, black as well as white, must speak out against such views whenever ad wherever they rise." Representative Minetta said that Marianne Hall should resign before the day is over. He said her in-volvement with this piece of hate iterature and disowns it are the actions of one who is unwilling to accept responsibility for her actions.

Accept responsibility for her actions. Senator Mathias, Chairman of the Senator Mathias, Chairman of the Senator Judiciary Subcommittee on Patent, Trademark and Copyright, has asked for the White House and FBI files on Marianne Mele Hall be made available to his committee for investigation. The Senator has sent President Reagan a letter asking that he request her resignation. Mr. Mathias gave the President three reasons for her resignation: Ms. Hall's name appears on "Founda-tion of Sand" as co-author - her dedicated her contribution to her parents and daughter following com-pletion of the book, Ms. Hall agreed to serve on the board of a corpora-tion established to receive the pro-ceeds from the sale of the book, the text of this book expounds the doc-tine that certain Americans are acially inferior to others.

Vice President Bush said during the campaign that this Administra-tion will not tolerate racism whe-ther it is from Louis Farrakhan or the Ku Klux Klan. While Mr. Bush could not be reached by telephone, his office stated that he had not commented on Marianne Mele Hall's racist statements Hall's racist statements.
