breakfast at the McCrorey YMCA, then take his sons to see King Day parade. "It's a regular thing," he said. "I try to catch it every year."

Eaves is not only president of the Northeast Community Organization, but is a member of League of Women Voters, Charlotte Women's Political Caucus and the Black Political Caucus. She has also chaired her precinct, No. 60.

King was an assertive and aggressive person, Eaves said. "He liked to empower people. That's one of my goals, to empower people. I think folks can do a whole lot by being empowered," she said.

Eaves worries about whether King's dream will ever be realized.

"There is too much hatred. We just have to continue to try. You see how affirmative action is. Folks don't care. The Republicans don't care about the poor. There will be poor folks forever. We have to think about them and worry about them.

"We have come a long way, but we have got to go a long way. We have got to work with our own people. A lot of us can't work with each other. White and black can't accept who we are. Until we do, we are never going to be able to achieve anything."

REMEMBERING.....

"I address this message to our YOUTH.

Are you aware of the struggles of DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., do you know that he died for causes that would set us free from strife, from having to be considered second class, that limited our choices? YOU are not taking advantage of the things he gave his life for. Please not let it be said, that he died in vain."
