

Woodard leads review board

and a Native American woman, Patrick Clark, is vice chair. Woodard said the board's makeup will not be without challenges. "The board will undertake many challenges as it casually changes from its typical makeup of white men and ex-police officers to civilians and minorities," Woodard said. "The board will increase its sensitivity to the concerns of the community. The board will be extremely fair in its deliberations of employee hearings. The honesty of this board will be impeccable." The civil service board is charged with insuring that hiring and promotion of police and fire employees is done solely on "fitness, competency and merit," rather than political, economic or social influence. Police and fire personnel can appeal disciplinary actions, including dismissals, taken by supervisors to the board.
