5 remain for top Durham
police job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM - Five finalists have been named for the job of Durham police chief, including Tucson, Ariz.'s highest-ranking black police commander and a woman police commander from Maryland.

The other finalists are from Virginia, Miami and Washington, D.C.

The Durham department has about 400 employees.

Tucson Assistant Chief Collier Hill, 48, who heads the Tucson department's Investigative Services Bureau, oversees 250 people. He has been with the Tucson police since 1973.

Teresa C. Chambers, 40, commands about 200 employees as district commander at the Prince Georges County, Md., police department near Washington, D.C.

The other finalists are Atlas L. Gaskins of Newport News, Va.; Larry Mathieson of Miami; and Robert Crump White of Fort Washington, Md.

Gaskins, 49, has been assistant police chief of Newport News since 1991. Mathieson, 48, is a major in the Metro-Dade (Fla.) Police Department.

White, 45, has been director of public safety for the District of Columbia Housing Authority since 1995. He previously was a commander in the Washington, D.C., police department.
