port the school financially.

"As a family, we'll get through this," said freshman Eric Cooks.

Barber-Scotia is like a small family.

The historically-black liberal arts college has an enrollment of 543 students, according to the National Center for Education Statistics and the Carnegie Foundation.

Cooks said he isn't worried about changes at Barber-Scotia as long as the school keeps its accreditation.

"As long as we're still accredited, everything is fine," he said. Cooks said

But for freshman Amanda

McKoy, things aren't fine. She's planning to transfer to North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro at semester's end.

"I'm worried about what's going on here," she said. "No one told us why (Potts and Erwin resigned). I feel like we need to know a lot more."

With all the turmoil going on, McKoy she doesn't feel as if she is getting her money's worth.

"I was going to leave anyway," she said. "It's just not worth it."

Potts, who had served as Barber-Scotia's president since 1996, was the school's 14th president, according to a release from the school.

After nine years as an administrator at Barber-Scotia, Potts left in 1988 to serve as interim president of Mary Holmes College in West Point, Miss., where he was named president in 1989. He held that position until he returned to Concord.

Neither Potts nor Erwin could be reached for comment.

De Lange said that someone's not knowing whether he or she had the infection would be no protection from prosecution. This is because everyone is responsible for finding out.

He was speaking during a discussion about amending South Africa's Sexual Offences Act, which also made watching a rape or indecent act a prosecutable offense.
