Gist

Denisha Hendricks PhD and Kristene Kelly of Johnson C. Smith University have been selected to participate in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Leadership Institute for Ethnic Minority Females.

Hendricks, JCSU's senior women's administrator, is coordinator of the health and human performance department. Kelly is the school's sports information director.

The institute is designed to address the shortage of senior level women of color in athletics administration at NCAA member institutions and conference offices.

• Kelsie Gibson of Kannapolis Middle School has been recognized as U.S. National Honor Student Award winner by the U.S. Achievement Academy.

Kelsie, a seventh-grader, has also been selected an All-American Scholar Award winner through the All-American Scholar Educational Grants program. She is an all-A Honor Roll student and an active participant in Duke University's Talent Identification Program for mathematically and verbally talented students.

• Jewell D. Hoover has been appointed to the N.C. Banking Commission.

Hoover is president of Hoover and Associates, a banking consulting firm in Charlotte. She is president of the Diversity Council of the Carolinas, member of Leadership Charlotte and National Association for Women Business Owners. The banking commissioner supervises, directs and reviews all actions of the commissioner of banks on issues ranging from establishment of new banks and opening bank branches and mergers.

• Anquan Gist joined Omni Visions as Piedmont regional director. He will be responsible for coordination and delivery of services for foster care children.

Prior to Omni Visions, Gist was foster care director at Alexander Youth Network, where he was responsible for developing annual operation objectives and strategies.

• Magdy Attia PhD recently earned the Richard Neel Award for Career Achievement from Information Technology Charlotte.

Attia, chairman of Johnson C. Smith University's computer science and engineering department, was recognized for 16 years of teaching and research at the school. Under Attia's leadership, JCSU graduates more African American computer science majors than any college in the Carolinas.

Activists took on community issues by Newton, Bobby Seale and Richard Aoki in 1966 in the wake of the assassination of Malcolm X, the riot in Watts, Calif., and the frustration some Black leaders had with non-violent civil rights efforts.

The new group immediately announced its principles in a revolutionary Ten-Point Program that called for, among other things, "land, bread, housing, education, clothing, justice, peace, an end to capitalist economic exploitation" and exemption of African Americans from military service.

One of the primary goals of the Black Panther Party was to stop abuse committed by local police departments, especially those in the South. Starting in their native city of Oakland, armed Black Panthers conducted neighborhood patrols to watch police and ensure that law enforcement officials did not harass black citizens.

The party, which had more than 30 chapters nationwide, was known for instituting several survival programs in various cities that were designed to serve neighborhoods that were in need of aid or thought to be neglected by the government. These services included clothing distribution, classes on politics and economics, free medical clinics, drug and alcohol abuse rehabilitation, an emergency ambulance program and transportation to prisons for families of inmates.
