Hello There, Alumni!

Like all college and university graduates, you are fair game for requests for financial aid to your Alma Mater.

And rightly so!

You should participate in the growth of not only the college or colleges you attended, but even in the promotion of the high school from which you graduated.

This does not necessarily mean financial support. There are other ways you can show interest and appreciation for the education and guidance you have received. We are anxious to have you keep up with the continuing expansion of Chowan College, both in its physical plant and its educational services. You can do this by visiting the college as frequently as possible and learning, first hand, what is really happening.

If you have not visited the campus in the last few years you will be absolutely amazed. It is completely impossible, through words or pictures, to carry the complete story of the Chowan College of today.

There is still much about the campus that would recall your days here, and even though your classmates have gone on to other things, you will find a visit to your Alma Mater most interesting. How about it?

A Job Well Done

The 1964-65 basketball season is over. The jerseys, warm-up jackets, and the like have been stored until next year. Trophies have been placed proudly in their place. Statistics have been written in record books that will close another chapter in the sports history of Chowan College.

The Braves have made a great showing in regular season play and listed probably more entries in the "win" column as any team in recent years. And, they fared well in tournament competition, too. These records are impressive to be sure . . . but there is more to sports than the results of contests.

The entire team has displayed excellent sportsmanship since their very first practice session, and have proved that they can be good losers as well as proud winners. Coach William McCraw has guided his team members well and has given them determination to win, courage to lose, but always with instructions of play that are founded on the Golden Rule.

All these things have brought honor and glory to Chowan College—and we're proud of it! We're proud of each team member and the records they have set . . . we're proud of their coach for the valuable guidance he has given them . . . but most of all, we're proud of the way they have played the game.

The Chowanian Salutes . . .

Five students who are working "beyond the call of duty"

In the second picture are Kenneth Myrick, Amelia, Ohio and Allen Glenn (Spot) Seager, Portsmouth, Virginia, who are shown at a Linotype machine setting type for the college annual.

All five of these students have worked many hours between classes, at night, and on many week-ends to take pictures, prepare copy, make layouts, and set type for college publications.

"Pat" Shuffler has done outstanding work as Chief Photographer for student publications; Charles Stevens, Editor-In-Chief of THE CHOWANOKA, has been responsible for much of the copy preparation, the layout and design, and offset processes for the annual; James Boughan has put in many hours preparing printing plates and actually printing many sections for THE CHOWANOKA.

Of course before the boys in the offset department can proceed, copy must be set on Linotypes, corrected, and proofed for reproduction. Ken Myrick and "Spot" Seager have used most of their spare time doing this work.

So it is only proper that THE CHOWANIAN salutes the five Chowan College School of Graphic Arts students who are showing sincere interest and taking active parts in promoting their class annual and THE CHOWANIAN as well. The five are also to be commended because each one plans to attend a four-year college and study for a BS degree in graphic arts.
