

Chowan College Faculty Grows With Additions

A Wilmington native who has been teaching at Carthage for the past three years, Gilbert Allen Tripp, Jr., has become a professor this year in the Department of Science and Mathematics at Chowan College.

Professor Tripp is a graduate of Campbell College, where his major course of study was in Science and Social Science, who earned the Masters degree in Science from East Carolina University.

Miss Rebecca Kinnamon

A Forsyth county native listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," and nominated for "Teacher of the Year" honors at Winston-Salem where she has taught in junior high schools for the past five years, Miss Rebecca Ann Kinnamon, has become a professor of English at Chowan College.

A talented musician, public speaker and creative writer, she formerly served as yearbook editor, student government president and officer of Chi Beta Women's Society. She is also an active member of five teachers' organization.

She earned her undergraduate degree at Maryville College and her graduate degree from Duke University, singing in the choir at both institutions, and has held numerous leadership positions. She has also completed further graduate study at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

James B. Dewar, Jr.

James B. Dewar, Jr., a native of Harnett County who earned undergraduate and graduate degrees from East Carolina University, is now a professor in the Department of Science and Mathematics at Chowan College.

Professor Dewar served for three years as a high school Biology teacher at Martinsville, Va., and served as a naturalist for three years with the Division of Virginia Parks. While pursuing graduate studies at East Carolina, he has been teaching freshman Biology laboratory classes for the past two years.

Professor Dewar was a member of Chi Beta Phi, national honorary Science fraternity, at East Carolina.

N. Edward Wooten

A graduate instructor at Wake Forest University who has been an assistant YMCA camp director for five years, N. Edward Wooten, has joined the faculty of Chowan College's department of Science and Mathematics.

Professor Wooten instructed freshman Mathematics at Wake Forest for two years. At Wake Forest, he also was a Hankins scholar (1961-65) and served on chapel and orientation committees for several years.

Unwillingness to forgive another may or may not hurt him, but surely harms you.

BIRTHDAY PARTY — Professor John McSweeney, Director of the School of Graphic Arts, observed a birthday on Friday, October 13. The printing students took a short time from their classes to give the amiable teacher a surprise party. Mr. "Mac" cuts the cake which was baked by a Teletype student. He is reluctant to reveal his age, and will only say that he is "over 39".

HONORED AT PARTIES — Miss Frances White, of the English department at Chowan, was the recipient of two pre-nuptial parties last month. The Religion department gave a luncheon for Miss White at the home of Mrs. Mixon. A few weeks later the English department entertained at a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larson for Miss White and her fiance, Mr. Gordon Coleman. On each occasion silver gifts were presented.

First Class of Nursing Students Completes 33-Month Course

Successfully completing the licensing examination to become Registered Nurses and pursuing medical careers in four hospitals are six members of the first class of graduates from Chowan College's 33-month program of education for nursing.

Elizabeth Jean Crawford of Ahoskie is nursing at Ahoskie's Roanoke-Chowan hospital. Mrs. Stephen Kent Dickens, the former Sandra Hare of Edenton, is at Wilson and Judy Evelyn Shearin of Roanoke Rapids is nursing at Roanoke Rapid's hospital. Duke hospital is the site for nursing careers of Kitty Garriss of Jackson, Julia Louise Hayes of Rocky Mount and Marsha Purvis of Ahoskie.

Nursing graduates of Chowan's program who are pursuing their careers at Ahoskie, Roanoke Rapids and Wilson are general duty nurses and those with Duke are members of that hospital's Obstetrics department. Another member of Chowan's first graduating class of seven nurses, Judith Kay Grimm of Charlotte, is also employed at Duke and plans completion of the licensing examination in the near future.

"Chowan College can take justifiable pride in the record of this first graduating class," said Chowan's president Dr. Bruce E. Whitaker. "These young nurses exceeded our expectations. The Chowan College faculty and personnel involved at Roanoke-Chowan and Duke hospitals, where these nurses had their clinical education supervised by Chowan's nursing faculty, are to be congratulated. Chowan College is proud of its first R. N.'s."

Deliberate determination to understand others is among the highest steps in wholesome human relationships.
