

Intramural champions announced

Main of McDowell Columns defeated previously undefeated Rebs of West Hall 25-6 Oct. 28 for the campus intramural flag football championship.

Earl Dilday, director of intramural sports at Chowan and dean of men, explained that the top six teams during regular season were eligible for the playoffs. The teams selected and their season's records were:

Rebs 6-0, Sixty-niners of West 6-0, Chicken Whippers of East 5-1, Grouche of Mixon 5-1, Gophers of Mixon 4-2, and Main 3-3.

In capturing the championship, Main won three straight.

Other sports completed include track, cake race, and table tennis. Basketball foul shooting and billiards will round out the winter semester schedule.

Ten events were scheduled for the track meet, held Sept. 30. They were: 60-yard dash, shot putt, 440-yard relay, discus, 220-yard dash, running broad jump, standing broad jump, 880-yard relay, 100-yard, and mile relay.

The winner was the Gibbs House Gang who nosed out the Sissies of Mixon 27-25.

The cake race competition found the girls baking the cakes (each residence hall floor was represented) and the boys running a mile. The first eight crossing the finish line received cakes. The winner was Mickey Fletcher.

Head football coach, Jim Garrison, emerged as the table tennis winner. Rounding out the top four were Bill Hernandez, Earl Dilday, and Bob Griffin.

The spring semester will see competition in basketball in January, swimming in mid-February, tennis in mid-March, softball the last of March, and horseshoes the first of April.

The Cavalier-Tarheel Intramural Conference meet will be held in April at a site yet to be selected. Chowan has won the championship the past three years.

Dilday, in evaluating the intramural scene to date, praised student Howard Green, who serves as intramural field supervisor. Green, on a student work-study aid program, works for the intramural director and is "doing a very good job," Dilday said. Duties include lining out the field and getting the teams together with Dilday. "We have also had some good officials," Dilday said.

The dean of men listed several values of the intramural program. "It gives students who are not participating in collegiate competition the opportunity to compete against other students," he said.

This is true for both team and individual competition, he said. Dilday feels that experience and practice in a sport has carryover value later in life when a person may continue a sport for recreation and exercise.

He also stated that "team sports build up a spirit of working together."

Twenty-four units (teams) from the men's residence halls are competing for the College Intramural Championship.

Approximately 30-35 students form each unit. For their performances, each unit receives points which are applied toward the President's Cup competition (the Chowanian will report on the President's Cup in the December issue). The President's Cup will go to the men's residence hall with the highest number of points.

The play of the students has been "good clean competition," Dilday explained. "We have had exciting, close ballgames and competition. During football, teams would come out and scout other teams. Fans also include girl friends and students backing their teams. There's a lot of cheering going on. It's been good fun for everyone." "Coach" Dilday said.

At Chowan, intramural activities combine with varsity sports and physical education athletics to provide the backdrop for "sporting for all." Garrison serves as athletic director as well as head football coach and golf coach. Football assistants are Sam Green, who also coaches tennis, and Jerry Hawkins, baseball coach. Completing the coaching staff is Bill McCraw, who coaches basketball and track.

Medical secretary

Chowan College graduate of the medical secretarial administration program, Mrs. Becky Jones, is shown in her office at the Mental Health Clinic in Ahoskie. A secretary, Mrs. Jones completed two years at Chowan and an internship of nine months at Duke Medical Center.

Chowan graduate at health clinic

On May 20, 1969, Becky Baggett, now Mrs. Becky Jones, was one of 194 students to graduate from Chowan College. Two days later the product of Chowan's medical secretarial administration program of the department of business was busy with her new duties as secretary at the Mental Health Clinic in Ahoskie.

Mrs. Jones now resides in Union with her husband of five months, Gordon, who works at Farmer's Chemical. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baggett of St. John. Her father operates the Esso station in Winton.

A typist, Mrs. Jones is involved in a number of activities including typing patients' evaluations, typing therapy notes, answering the telephone, and other duties.

She comments that the Chowan program for medical secretaries, headed by Mrs. Pat Edwards, gave her thorough preparation for her present work. She found no difficulty in her transition from intern at Duke Medical Center: a nine-months program, and assuming responsibilities at the Mental Health Clinic.

She especially appreciates the medical terminology class which all medical secretarial students take at Chowan. "It has been very helpful to me," she said. She studied two years at Chowan before completing her internship at Duke.

One of her assignments at Duke took her to the psychiatric clinic of the outpatient clinic for two months. She said her activities there helped prepare her for her present work.

She says she is enjoying her work at the Mental Health Clinic. "I had often thought about working here and I'm very pleased to have the opportunity," Mrs. Jones commented.

Unhappiness is not knowing what we want and killing ourselves to get it. —Don Herold.

Printing industry seeks young women

By MALCOLM JONES
The printing industry has witnessed drastic changes during recent years, due to a technological revolution. This changing picture has created problems, but, on the other hand, it brings the industry a whole new concept of progress and improvement.

While this revolution continues to gain momentum, the graphic arts industry has discovered the increasing demand for trained personnel, and most certainly the need for both men and women qualified in the new technologies.

Today, to put it briefly, the graphic arts industry offers challenging and rewarding career opportunities to women. The widely diversified industry has discovered a whole new area of employment potential in what was, just a few years ago, considered to be a man's world.

With an intensified demand for competent employees, women, too, are discovering the opportunities now available to them. They are needed and wanted in an exciting employment market.

They have shown an aptitude and demonstrated an ability to become a valuable asset in a challenging and sophisticated graphic arts industry.

This fall, when the Chowan College School of Graphic Arts completed registration of students for its two-year curriculum, there were 65 students enrolled: six of these were young ladies.

In the years which follow, the percentage of female students is expected to increase. The reasons are obvious—demand, challenge, opportunity, financial reward and most of all a satisfying career in a whole new and rapidly growing graphic arts industry.

Girls, do you want to break open the door which has already been "cracked?" Talk with your guidance counselor, inquire of friends in the industry and write the Chowan College School of Graphic Arts at P.O. Box 277, Murfreesboro, N. C. 27855 for brochures.
