

ON COMMON GROUND—Like preachers' kids, the children of college presidents have many things in common. When they have met this year and last (as here on the Carrie Rich Memorial Library mall at Campbell College) Beth Poston, senior English major, and Barry Whitaker, senior majoring in trust education, could compare notes on their common experience of changing colleges in mid-course. Beth, who will graduate at Campbell's winter-term commencement December 20, transferred last year for a taste of campus life away from home. She is the daughter of president and Mrs. Eugene Poston of Gardner-Webb. Barry is the son of President and Mrs. Bruce E. Whitaker of Chowan College.

GRADUATE VISITS CAMPUS—Robert R. Vaughan, junior at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro from High Point, who attended Chowan from 1970-72, returned for a recent visit. The political science major is married to Chowan's 1971 graduation head marshal, Betsy Robbins, also of High Point. Vaughan reviews the latest annual with Darrell H. Nicholson, registrar. He is one of a number of students who return each year to visit members of the faculty and staff. Nicholson remarked that Chowan personnel are always happy to greet former students at Chowan.

BSU Reviews First Semester; Makes Plans for Spring Term

By THOMAS LONG

The Baptist Student Union Campus Christian Fellowship, known as the BSU-CCF is in full swing this semester. This organization is sponsored by Christian laymen and scholars who relate Christianity to various phases of contemporary life. During Evangelism Week and Christian Emphasis Week, students have the opportunity to hold individual and small group conferences with guest speakers.

The first semester showed a growth in the BSU-CCF activities. Freshmen composed the largest part of BSU membership.

Last semester started with open house and in September the Shorb Brothers appeared in a coffeehouse setting at one of the early meetings. First semester meetings featured speakers from the State Convention, a local preacher, and religion professors. The weekend revival teams had the opportunity to travel to Cool Springs Baptist Church, Boykins Baptist Church, and the Kennedy Home.

President Tommy Speight and other BSU leaders have planned some new and different things for the Spring semester. This semester the BSU will continue the Wednesday morning prayer breakfast in the cafeteria, Thursday evening prayer meetings, and the ministry to Pinewood Manor Rest Home. Another retreat is planned for sometime after mid-semester and the BSU will travel again to beautiful Camp Leech in Bath, N.C.

All students are welcome to join the weekly meetings held in the Askew Student Union on Monday nights at 7:00 p.m. The president is asking that all the campus Christians to unite in prayer and ask God to have mercy on us all.

RECEIVES GIFT—A gift of $1,000 has been presented to Chowan College by West Point Pepperell Foundation, Inc. The check was presented to Chowan's president, Dr. Bruce E. Whitaker, by Don Sledge, industrial engineer at Pepperell's Ahoskie plant, Alamac Knitting Division. Also present were Charles Geer, Jr., (left), Alamac's manager, and Ollie M. Brown, Ahoskie campaign chairman for Chowan's "Mission Possible" program.

College Receives Foundation Gift

Chowan College has received a gift of $1,000 from West Point Pepperell Foundation, Inc. for the development program of the college.

The check presentation was made to Chowan's president, Dr. Bruce E. Whitaker, at West Point Pepperell's Ahoskie plant, Alamac Knitting Division, by its manager, Charles Geer, Jr., and Don Sledge, industrial engineer. A son of Sledge, Ronald, is a second year student at Chowan.

In expressing thanks to West Point Pepperell, Dr. Whitaker called the gift "timely" and said it would help the college in the financing of the new science-engineering facility now under construction.

Dr. Whitaker said the support of West Point Pepperell would assist the college in reaching its "Mission Possible" development fund program goal of $1 million toward the cost of constructing the $1.2 million building.

"Chowan needs the new science-engineering facility available for the use of its students by the summer of 1973 and the support of corporations, such as West Point Pepperell.

Continued Dr. Whitaker, "It is significant that West Point Pepperell, one of our leading local industries, has joined with Chowan College in providing for this critically needed facility to serve young people. Beyond the obvious immediate value, this evidence of local support will assist us as we seek gifts and support in other areas of North Carolina and Virginia."

Currently, the "Mission Possible" campaign is in an intensive drive to reach $1 million by the year's end.

Also present were Ollie M. Brown, Ahoskie campaign chairman for "Mission Possible," and Bobby Cross, Chowan's director of development.
