

Grants, scholarships available for study

Grants designed especially for Southern Baptists are among the many offered by Chowan College, the only two-year school sponsored by the Baptist State convention of North Carolina.

Clifton Collins, director of financial aid, said grants are offered Southern Baptists who are studying for the ministry or other church-related vocations, and children and spouses of employees of churches and agencies related to the Southern Baptist Convention. Ministerial students receive $500 per semester and the others $250 per semester.

He said $250 grants per semester are offered to Baptist Children's Homes of North Carolina graduates.

Presidential Scholarships

Among the top scholarships awarded are five presidential for full tuition and 15 academic honors including five for three-fourths tuition and 10 for one-half tuition.

Collins urged students who are interested in attending Chowan or one of North Carolina's other Baptist colleges and universities to contact the financial aid office about the availability of scholarships. He said this is important "especially since many scholarships and grants are designated for individuals in certain fields of study or from certain geographical areas."

Other Aid Available

He stressed that other forms of financial aid are available for the state's Baptist Colleges in addition to grants and scholarships. "During 1984-85, about 500 students received financial assistance including over 350 who were involved in work-study," Collins commented.

President Bruce Whitaker said the Scholarshare program is designed to attract financial support from alumni and friends to help the college provide work-study opportunities for its students. He said gifts to the Scholarshare program range from $10 a month to an outright gift.

Increased Support

Whitaker said the college has received increased support for scholarships over the past several years to help meet the increase in requests for financial aid from students. He said one of the newer scholarships, the George T. Underwood Scholarship, was established with a $25,000 gift from Mrs. Anne T. Underwood of Coats in memory of her late husband, who was one of the college's leading benefactors and a deacon at Murfreesboro Baptist Church.

The president said the scholarships provided by alumni and friends to Chowan and the state's other Baptist colleges are "vital" in providing a college education to young people. "Many deserving students would not be able to attend Chowan, Campbell University, Gardner-Webb College, Mars Hill College, Meredith College, Wake Forest University or Wingate College without scholarship or other financial assistance," Whitaker announced.

Krautheim named West Hall director

Mark David Krautheim has begun his employment as a residence director in West Hall, a facility for approximately 200 men. His secondary duties are in athletics as an assistant football coach.

"Krautheim is just the kind of person we needed for this two-fold position. He just completed requirements for the Master's degree from the College of William and Mary. He played five years of varsity football at William and Mary," said Clayton Lewis, dean of students.

Krautheim is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Krautheim, 35 Redman Place, Totowa. He is a graduate of Passaic Valley High School, Little Falls.

Diana Burke named to post in Admissions

Diana Frances Burke of Athens, a graduate of Clark Central High School and Sacred Heart College, Charlotte, has begun employment at Chowan College as a member of the admissions staff. She will represent the college in Florida, Georgia and parts of North Carolina.

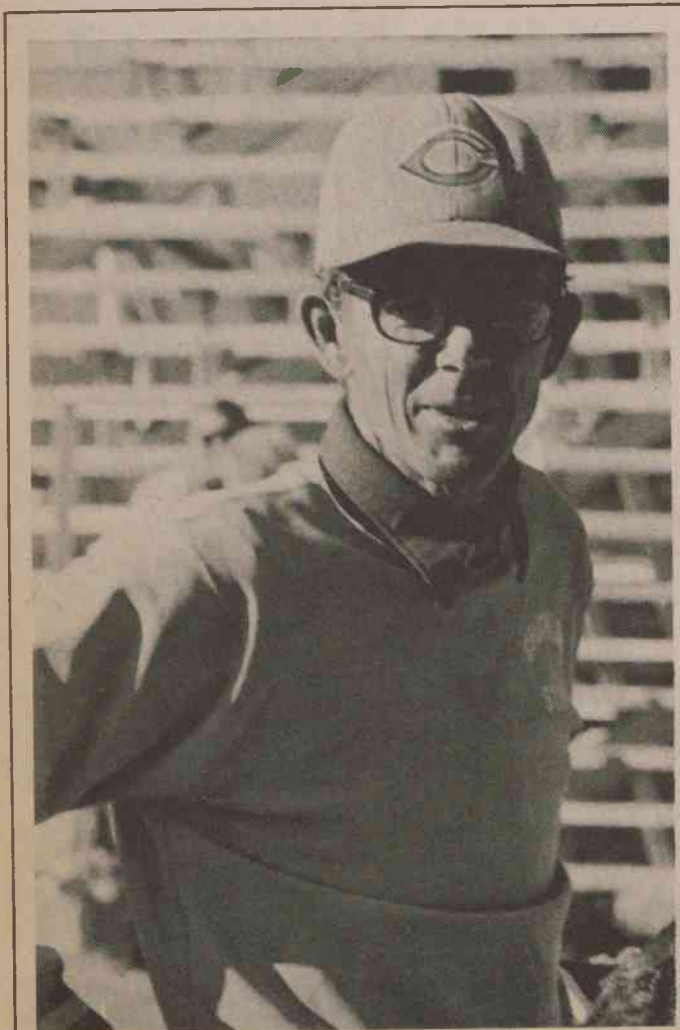

"Chowan is a transfer college. Over 85 percent of the graduates transfer to senior colleges/universities and complete requirements for the bachelor's degree," said Winslow L. Carter, director of admissions.

Burke is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Burke, 115 Woodvalley Lane, Athens.

Monogrammed gifts

Two members of the Office of Admissions resigned their positions prior to the beginning of the fall semester and were praised by Clayton Lewis, Dean of Students, for their valuable service to the college as associate directors of admissions. In the top photo, Lynn Gruber admires a Chowan monogrammed mug presented during a luncheon at a local restaurant. In the lower photo, Paul Traywick is presented a similar gift by Lewis. Traywick is teaching high school science in Lee County, and Gruber has returned to her native state of Pennsylvania.

Setting football records

Director of Athletics and head football coach James Garrison, in his 28th year of service, is the sixth winningest active junior college football coach in the country. He has a 153-109-10 record and the longest tenure of any two-year college football coach.
