BOLL WEEVIL CONDITIONS AND CONTROL. (By W. B. Callihan.)

The boll weevil conditions around Sanford are very serious in fields that have not been properly mopped This fact has been proven by making a number of infestation counts on va rious farms in Lee county.

Mr. W. B. Thomas, in the Broadway community, has 200 acres of cotton. Some has been poisoned four times vested in industrial enterprises and with sweetened poison and some has that the State leads the entire countnot been poisoned. In the fields that ry in the textile industry are includ-

It is not practical to peel except during the spring and summer.

Some paper mills, depending upon the produce they manufacture, will accept pine wood with some of the inner bark left on, while others making a different grade of paper demand that all slivers of both outer and inner bark he removed. The cotton should also be moist with dew.

It is very important to use good machines for dusting, and a number of men with small farms are asking tio about one mule, 2 row dusters. Two of the best cheap dusters on the market can be bought from Palmer & Reeves for $65 each. The names of these two machines are the Champion and the Perfection.

Further information may be tained from the Planters Produce & Storage Company, Florence, S. C.

It is very economical to dust, for Palmer & Reeves, in Sanford, sell Niagara Calcium Arsenate for only dime per pound. It will cost only 40c per acre for dust when four pounds are used per acre. The three applications which should be put on at four-day intervals, will cost only$1.20. If one can make from one quarter to one half bales of cotton more per acre with $1.20 plus the cost of labor and machinery to apply the dust, he has made a wise investment.

It is wise to "pick up' when time permits. It is good to use long single trees in plowing to shake the squares off so that the sun and hot mulch may kill the weevil larvae in the squares, but the thing that every farmer should strive to do is to poison and kill the weevil before it punctures the squares. quare will not make a boll of cotto after it has been punctured and falls

PREPARING PULP WOOD FOR UNIFORM ANNUAL MARKET REQUIRES BRAINS.

(By R. W. Graeber, Extension Forest-er North Carolina State Colege,) The article quoted below from the pen of R. W. Graeber, State Exten-sion Forester, was submitted to J. W. Gilliam, the pioneer pulpwood producer and dealer of Samord, and he states that it is a very practicable suggestion on the preparation of wood. He suggests that the summer or peeling season be utilized for felling and peeling trees, and that winter months furnish an opportun-ity for sawing up the trees and haul-

The only advantage offered by The only advantage offered by the spring and summer season is that the bark slips easier and a cleaner job of peeling can be done. The disadvantage to the so-called "peeling" season is the danger of starting the bark beetle. The danger is not apparent when a continuous operation is being carried on all season. Where small cuttings are made at intervals during the summer, all stumps should be cut very low and the trees peeked immediately, being sure that all wood above three inches in diameter peeled.

A few of the paper mills formerly accepter what is known as "bug or worm peepel" pine wood. In this case the quality of the wood and the resultant product were materially lowered. There is now a rapid change from this old custom. We would not advise a farmer to use this method of peeling any more than we would advise him to sell damaged notatoes.

Must Please Buyer. In preparing pulpwood the specifi-cations of the buyer must be follow-ed. But in most cases the wood must be cut five feet in length—all ends sawed square. Wood four inches in diameter and up will be ac-cepted. Usually no wood under 14 inches in diameter is split. Some buyers require that wood above this size be split, while others will accept it in the round. Since wood is cut 5 feet in length, 160 cubic feet is generally considered a cord. Certain erally considered a cord. Certain mills use the standard cord 128 cubi feet, while in a few cases mills spec-ify 180 cubic feet as their unit of

To facilitate drying, it is best to put up, pulnwood in square pens Six pens five feet high is generally con-sidered as a cord. This is fairly ac-curate when average size wood is be-ing cut. In a recent check-up on a ing cut. In a recent check-up on a 100-cord operation we found the average to be 20 sticks per cord or 20 sticks per pen. In case of large six 5 foot pens would overrun a cord, and with small wood more than six and with small wood more than six pens would be required.

Various Tools Are Used For Peeling.
When peeling pulpwood all knots must be cut smooth with the side of the stick, all bark around knots and other depressions must be removed. No burnt or dead wood will be accept ed. Tools for peeling vary with the season and other conditions. These would include the drawing knife sharp spade with the "goose neck" straightened so as to be used like a spade, and other improvised tools. Several tool manufacturers are making special peeling tools. The Counting Special peeling tools. The Counting Special peeling tools.

spade, and other improvised tools. Several tool manufacturers are making special pecling tools. The Council Tool Co., Wananish, N. C., is making a set of tools consisting of a long Sanford people somewhat similar to the hoe, but heavier, and a small ironhandled spud. These tools are yet in the experimental stage—a number of sets have been sent to farmers and other pulpwood operators for trial.

For peeling short leaf pine during the winter season the "drawing knife" is apparently the most satisfactory tool. But for summer peeling any of the other tools will give faster results. The loblolly pine peels somewhat easier than shortleaf, so the spade hoe or special tool will be useful during any season of the year. Certain types of peeling machinery have been made but have not been thoroughly perfected. Some of these cut away too much wood, the waste prh oligntti b sh mh mhmh prohibiting their use, while others made on a different principle do not completely bark certain kinds of wood. The need of a more perfect machine is apparent, but conditions in dicate that for some time yet, hand peeling will be the system in getting
