Miss Frances Donnell is Honored.
Honoring her attractive and popular sister, Miss Frances Donnell, who is at home from Wesley Long Hospital for her vacation, Miss Olive Donnell very delightfully entertained Monday afternoon at four tables of bridge.

The tables were arranged in a setting of colorful summer flowers and the progressions were most spirited. High score prize, a set of powder and perfume, was won by Miss Grace Stout and to the guest of honor was presented a lovely sport sweater. The hostess served a frozen fruit salad with sandwiches, pickle, cheese straws and iced tea.

Playing were Misses Frances and Olive Donnell, Virginia Moss Formy-Duval, Mildred Cross, Mildred Reeves, Frances Wilkins, Jean McIver, Mabel Monroe, Ruth Phillips, Grace Stout, Helen Leverette, Melissa Street, Margaret Gurley, Juanita Moffitt, Marion Ruark, of Southport, and Louise Wright, of Montgomery, Ala.

Miss Weaver Gives Lawn Party.

One of the most beautiful lawn parties of the summer season was given Thursday evening by Miss Agnes Weaver at her home on Charlotte Avenue, there being about fifty guests. Various lawn games were played and the spirit of the crowd was a joy indeed. Lemonade was served during the evening and at a late hour a number of delicious melons were cut.

Birthday Party.

A number of her young friends were most delightfully entertained on Saturday afternoon by Juanita Foster, lovely little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Foster, the occasion being her tenth birthday.

Many interesting games were played and the young hostess was the recipient of some lovely gifts. For refreshments the guests were invited into the dining room which was very lovely in a color note of pink.

Pink streamers descended gracefully from the central light to the table where masses of pink flowers surrounded the birthday cake with its glowing candles. Delicious pink and white ice cream and cake were served and the favors were unusually dainty pink baskets filled with mints. Guests were Jane Cook, Julia Baldwin, Mary Lewis McCormick, Lucille Griffin, Louise and Eleanor Long, and Margaret Wright, of Danville.

Shower For Recent Bride.

Honoring Mrs. L. Alexander McIver, a bride of July, the Workers' Council of Steele Street Sunday School gave a delightful linen shower Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. D. C. Lawrence, following a meeting of the council.

The affair was quite a surprise to the bride who expressed her appreciation of the many beautiful gifts. Ice cream and cake were served.

Miss Elizabeth Cross to Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Scott Cross announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Rev. Charles Edward Parker, of Winston-Salem. The wedding will occur at 5:30 in the afternoon of Thursday, September 4th, in Steele Street Methodist church, Sanford.

This announcement is fraught with peculiar interest in Sanford, the young bride-elect, who has lived here all of her life, being one of the loveliest girls ever reared in this community. She is a member of an old and prominent family, her great-grandfather, Major J. W. Scott, being one of the pioneer builders of the town. She is a graduate of Greensboro College for Women, class of 1925, and has hundreds of friends throughout the State won by her rare gifts of personality and character.

Mr. Parker is one of the most prominent of the younger Baptist ministers of the State. A native of Tarboro, he received his education at Campbell and Mars Hill Colleges, and is now the popular pastor of Beck's Memorial Chapel, Winston-Salem. During the absence of the pastor, Mr. Parker preached several Sundays at the First Baptist church of Sanford, and made a most pleasing impression on his hearers who expect him to go far in his chosen work.

Sunday School Class.

The regular monthly class meeting of Mrs. M. D. Foister's Sunday School class was held at the home of Miss Katherine Gunter Friday afternoon from 4 till 6.

Helen Hunt had charge of the devotional. The 121st Psalm was read followed by sentence prayers. A duet "Make Somebody Happy To-day" was sung by Tommie Lutterloh and Eudora Hatch.

Christine Gunter read an interesting article on "The Alphabet and Bible."

At the close of the program Mrs. Foister read an original paper on "Have Faith in Yourself, Faith in Your Friends, and Faith in God." During an enjoyable social hour the hostess and her mother, Mrs. L. C. Gunter, served delicious sandwiches and iced tea.

Miss Isenhour at Home.

Friends of Miss Martha Isenhour will be interested to learn that she is now at home in Colon recuperating from a recent operation at Scott Hospital. Miss Isenhour is one of the most popular members of Sanford's younger social set.

MAX ROYAL M. Y. QUILL

We never could understand it. It must be good, we used to think, because it was Shakespeare's; yet we had 'trodge, 'trodge into misty tomes, asked questions, and to be afraid, it was that little song from "As You Like It," you know.

"Under the greenwood tree Who loves to lie with me, etc. Study failing, research in vain, we decided that there was but one thing to do, interview that old Bard himself. That looked difficult at the outset. Spaketh we soothly and quoth Quill:

"How now, thou fond madman? What wouldst thou be about? Upsetst the pans of God and devil to see the old Bard?—kraut." "But, gentle coz, what's that 'kraut'?"

"To make it rhyme, thou foolish lout!" "Is true, varlet, his life is sped; but him must we see tonight. Prithce, wakest up, thou fool, we have a column to write."

Through poetic license, we were soon at Stratford-on-Avon. We approached Shakespeare's palatial shack and with much ado about knocking, finally aroused a Voice.

"We don't want any," said the Voice. "Where's William Shakespeare, the immortal playwright?" asked Quill.

"Down at the Mermaid Tavern, under that table behind the door—to Grandmother's house we go!" said Mrs. Shakespeare. "Poetry is like the famous Shakespeare nose—it runs in our family."

"Hathaway to find out things—athk quethionth," I said as we walked off, incidentally ducking a beautiful haymaker.

Into the Tavern we strode. Sure enough, there was Bill, under the table behind the door—that shielded the broom that swept the floor, that provided the dirty cracks for the House that Sack built.

"Is this Mr. Shakespeare?" I asked timidly—I mean, I asked Mr. Bill.

"No, I'm not myself today. Who might you be?" "Well, we might be Max Royal and M. Y. Quill, to spoil a good chance for a joke, and we are. We represent we added in a whisper, "The Sanford Express." We came to interview you."

"Oh, yes, I got your wire." Quill nudged me. It was plain ignorance on Shakespeare's part. Even a school boy knows that telegraphy was invented by Marco Polo, thousands of years after Shakespeare's death.

"Mr. Shakespeare, we want you to explain to us that little poem 'Under the greenwood tree' from 'As You Like It' (E. P. Dutton & Sons, $2.50), that is, if you are not—er, drinking."

"You old thing, you," answered the Bard of Avon. "I'm never drunk so long as I can lie on the floor without holding on. Well, how does this poem go?"

"Under the greenwood tree Who loves to lie with me—"

"Better pass that up," said Bill, "with a twinkle in his eye. We knew it!"

"And turn his merry note Unto the sweet bird's throat," droned Quill.

"We want you to explain that!" I shouted. "You want a damn lot," answered the Good Gray Poet.

"Come hither, come hither, come hither," said Shakey, "I heard you the first time."

"You used it thrice—three times," expostulated Quill, who doesn't like this line.

"Well," hummed and hawed Shakespeare, "I was getting paid by the word when I wrote that."

"Then you admit that you wrote it," I followed up quickly. But Quill drowned me out.

"Here shall he see No enemy But winter and rough weather!" I laughed outright. "Hither!" I said, "and weather," I added, "don't rhyme," I ended with a knowing glance at the Hoosier Schoolmaster.

"Maybe they don't," replied the Bard, "but I couldn't have said 'rough wither.' That wouldn't have had any sense to it."

"It would have made an ideal finish, then," cracked Quill, the fun-loving rover.

"Well, it looks like this is the end of the column," we said, "and here let us say good-bye. Good-bye."
