STATE NEWS

Condensed Items of Interest happening Throughout the State.

There will be a large attendance of pupils of the State schools here for the White Blind and Negro Deaf Mutes and Blind. Thursday seven special cars, all filled with pupils will arrive, each car being under the care of the faculty, and there will be chaperons from Murfreesboro, Asheville, Charlotte, Greensboro, Hamlet, Tay-boro, New Bern and Wilmington.
At the opening there will be at least 300 pupils, equally divided between the two races. The school for White Blind is near the capitol, and during this year many improvements have been made there. Not a few have been made at the school for Negro Deaf Mutes and Blind, which is well out in the Eastern part of the city, and which has a large farm and garden near the boundary. The pupils come from all parts of the State.
Whenever there are epidemics of scarlet fever or diphtheria one result has been an increase of the number of deaf mutes.—News and Observer.

The little four-year-old daughter of James Bright had a narrow escape from death last night at the home of J. D. Winalow, in this city, where she was visiting. A number of children were playing in the bathroom. The little child ran against the partly closed blind of the window which came open, throwing the child headlong to the street—eighteen feet below. When the child was picked up she was bleeding profusely from a severe wound in the temple. Dr.
McMullan was summoned and rendered medical aid. The condition of the child was greatly improved this morning, and the indications are that she will sustain no serious injury.—

Charles Leary, a colored man, was up before Justice of the Peace Barrington yesterday, charged with abandonment of his wife and for maliciously destroying property. &c.
The evidence showed that he had not contributed anything at all toward his better half's support since the first of January, and that besides he had been a charge upon her, for his food and shelter. He said that he didn't think he ought to give his wife anything, because she cooked where she got plenty to eat and could spare some. He was put under a bond of $25 to explain the matter to the next superior court.—New Bern Journal.

It is officially announced by the management of the Norfolk and Southern Railway, effective October 1st, next, that all of its passenger trains will use the union passenger station at Raleigh, N. C., now jointly used by the Seaboard Air Line railway, Southern railway and the Norfolk and Southern railway. This will be a great convenience to the traveling public using the Norfolk and Southern railway to and from Raleigh, by reason of the more central location of the union passenger station, and avoids a transfer between stations across the city by such passengers as have through tickets reading from or to stations on the Norfolk and Southern railway, in conjunction with other railway lines via Raleigh. Raleigh is to be congratulated now that all of the railway lines entering that city use one union station.—Greenville Reflector.

Mr. Curtis-Wiley and Mr. Robt.
Fields went sailing last Sunday afternoon in a small boat, and were enjoying themselves immensely sliding over the waves when of a sudden a blife puff of wind caught them off their guard and capsize the boat.
After splashing around in the water while they got on the bottom of the boat, and succeeded in fighting her up. Then they made for home to change clothes. Both looked like half-drowned rats when they got ashore.—Oriental News.

WITH THE FUNNY MEN

POSTER LAND.

Philander McCann, a soulful young man, Believed in the aesthetic life.

He had posters galore from ceiling to floor.
Which he worshipped instead of a wife.

So enraptured was he with posters, that, gee!
He was sadly deranged in his head.

But his chiefest delight was at ten every night.
When he tripped to his four-poster bed.

THE CURRY-COMB.

The Curry Comb's a toothsome dish—Though neither beast, nor fowl nor fish.
Most people like it quite well done—Ah, there's Miss Mary just had one—Once you begin you must not cease But serve it hot with elbow grease—'Most anyone, however, is able To serve a curry at his stable.

MEAGER SALARIES

Keep Young Men From the Ministry
—A Yearly Pittance.

Average yearly salaries paid by American Protestant churches: Methodist.....About $450 Baptist.....No complete statistics Presbyterian.....About $700 Congregational.....$907 Episcopal.....About $600 Writing in Munsey's Magazine for October, Walter Prichard Eaton declares, in the course of an article on "The Ministry as a Profession":

"The Protestant churches are alarmed over the dwindling number of students in their seminaries, and the increased difficulty of securing worthy recruits for the ministry. The minister's lot, if possible, is to be made easier, no less for practical considerations—even if these are not always confessed—than for ethical ones.

"We pay the workman $3 a day—or a little more—to build the church; and we pay the clergyman $2 a day—or a little less—to preach in it.

"To increase the salaries of ministers to a point where they can support and educate their families in decently and have a small margin over for the necessity of books and the luxury of a reserve, to a point where they are beyond the gnawing cares and nervous drain of poverty, is a crying need of the Protestant churches today.

"The demand for young, active ministers is at present greater than the supply, and a youth of marked ability is practically certain of a comfortable living almost as soon as he steps out of his divinity school.
It is the young minister who is in demand today, especially in the large city churches. The ministers themselves say that their 'dead line' is reached at the fiftieth year.

"Present conditions have now imposed more than poverty; because of the increased cost of living, they have come to impose privation, and intellectual, if not sometimes almost physical, starvation.

"On the other hand, to ask men to come into the ministry, to tempt them to come, because of the financial rewards, is to debase Christianity and to insult its Founder. Fortunately, there seems to be no immediate danger of this particular insult."
