THE PEOPLE VS. A RAILROAD. The Mattamussett Railway extension has been decided by the Governor and Council of State.

The resolution adopted by them imposes numerous conditions which were not contemplated by the Legislature. It will not be a doubt that the Norfolk and Southern railroad desired.

BACK TO THE SOIL. James I. Hill is a thoughtful man. He observes conditions—agricultural, industrial and commercial—and he forms sound views thereon.

James I. Hill is a thoughtful man. He observes conditions—agricultural, industrial and commercial—and he forms sound views thereon. When he says, as he did before the American Bankers' Convention last week, that agriculture is relatively on the down grade in this country, he furnishes food for much thought.

He is a railroad man, and as such he is more than anxious to see the productive energies of the country ever on the upgrade. For that matter, all of us desire plentiful yields of farm products.

time Mr. Hill is to be thanked for sounding a note of warning.

A HARD SAYING.

The best thing that some men ever do for the world is to die, says the Lexington Dispatch. That is a hard thing to say about any human being, and yet with reference to the person at whom it is aimed, it is strictly true.

THE HELLO BOX IN THE COUNTRY.

Under this caption the Atlanta Constitution on September 12 published the following editorial: "Commenting upon the marvelous manner in which the telephone is coming into vogue in the rural districts, and outlining its practical value to the farmer and the rural resident generally, the Manufacturers' Record says:

"It is not alone that the farmer can, in this way, keep posted as to the price of his products, and many of the farmers of the West depend entirely upon the telephone in making sales of grain and other produce.

"The claim of the Record that a telephone is even more essential to the country than to the city is entirely logical. In the city there is none of the isolation that characterizes the rural districts, and the means of communication, aside even from the telephone, are numerous and rapid.

Out last night? Headache and nervous this morning? Hieks! Capudine just the thing to fit you for business. Clears the head, braces the nerves. Try it. At drug stores.

these and other revolutionizing advantages, the telephone should be rapidly conquering the rural districts.

"So vividly was Mr. Roosevelt's country life commination impressed with the salutary results that had followed the general prevalence of telephones in the country that it named their patronage as one of the factors destined to solve the rural problem.

"With the South facing unprecedented prosperity, it is likely that the coming year will witness even greater progress on the part of this modern adjunct to life and business."

The method which has been adopted by the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company has placed this service within the reach of everyone. The service they offer is not cheap service because the price is low. It is good service. Their telephones are all Western Electric Company's Standard "Bell" instruments, such as are used throughout their entire system by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"From any one of their stations it is possible to talk not only to points connected with the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company system, but to any points reached by the long distance lines of the Southern Bell Company. That their plan is proving very popular is evidenced by the number of lines which are being built into each of their exchanges, and we hope that the time is not far distant when there will be a telephone line on every road and a telephone on every farm.

Woman Advocate of Advertising

Greenville, N. C., Sept. 22.—A romance that started from an advertisement last March, concluded in a marriage here this afternoon. The parties to this romance were Mr. James W. Pearce of Chatham county, and Mrs. Maggie Waters of Pinetown, Beaufort county. Mrs. Waters advertised for a position as governess and Mr. Pearce answered the advertisement. From this correspondence arose between, followed later by an exchange of photographs, a courtship by mail and finally a proposition to meet at a given point. The place of meeting agreed upon was Greenville, and both Mr. Pearce and Mrs. Waters reached here yesterday. They then met each other for the first time, and found no occasion for disappointment on the part of either. They decided to get married here and the ceremony was performed at Hotel Macon this afternoon by Rev. J. H. Shore, pastor of the Methodist Church.

How's Business?

This ad. is directed at the man who has all the business in his line in this community. Mr. Merchant—You say you've got it all. You're selling them all they will buy, anyhow. But at the same time you would like more business. Make this community buy more! Advertise strongly, judiciously, consistently. Suppose you can buy a lot of washtubs cheap; advertise a big washtub sale in this paper. Put in an inviting picture of a washtub where the readers can see it the minute they look at your advertisement. Talk strong on washtubs. And you will find every woman in this vicinity who has been getting along with a rickety washtub for years and years will buy a new one from you. That is creative business power.

Rev. J. H. Shore, pastor of the Methodist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Pearce, with the latter's little daughter, left on the 8:20 train for Raleigh, and from there will go on to the home of the bridegroom near Siler City.

George Mansfield found many things that puzzled him. He went one evening, as he often did, to his best friend, Lyman Burton. Burton was thirty years older than George. His hair was a little gray, but his clear blue eyes were full of youth and peace. "I have always been told and often read that the heavenly Father takes care of His children," George always stated his difficulties frankly. "Yes," Burton's eyes were turned to a spot of sun that lingered on the hill east of the valley. "Well, it does not look like it."

"Why?" He still watched the sunlight. "Well, it doesn't. I have seen too many cases where the wicked prosper and the righteous were poor, where the evil were happy and the good wretched. It does not look as if religion helps very much in this life, after all. "Of course I know the arguments," he hurried on, as Burton turned his eyes to him, "about our not knowing what really is prosperity, and that health and money and comfort are not what they seem. But that kind of argument does not satisfy at least, it does not satisfy me. Take the case of old man Monroe who lives down the creek here. If there was ever a good man, Monroe is one. He is surely a faithful Christian. He has always wanted to have money enough to educate his children, but never has. He has prayed every day for years that Charley might get well, but he has not; he gets worse all the time. Last year the lightning killed one of his horses—he had only two. This Spring the wind blew down his barn, and his cow was drowned in a freshet. The family has always lived on the ragged edge. I suppose they have enough to eat and wear, but that is all. How do you account for a case of that kind?"

"There was a time," said Burton, gravely, "when they did not have enough to eat and wear. They were hungry and cold most of the time for ten winters—the neighbors had to give them food. That was in the days before Monroe became a Christian. He was a bad man then, and could not hold a job, and wasted what little he did make.

"It seems very good to them to have a dry roof, three rooms, and plenty of good food out here where the air is clean and the world at peace. I have heard them thank God for it many times. Have you talked with him since the lightning killed his horse and the wind blew down the barn?"

"Yes," answered George. "Did he complain?"

"No." "Was he out of heart?"

"No." "Did he speak bitterly of his fellow men? Of luck? Of Providence?"

"No." "Then you have your answer," Burton smiled thoughtfully. "I don't quite understand," said the young man. "You see, George," Burton explained, gently, "you are looking in the wrong place. The spirit works inside instead of outside. When a man is born again, it is his spirit that is changed, and not the world outside.

"He has the same body and brain. It may be an inefficient body and an incapable brain; it may be a body cursed by heredity and weakened by habit; a brain undisciplined, untrained. The spirit will help him make the best of that body and brain, but it will not make them over for him. He will still be subject to disease and pain and failure as before.

"The world outside is not changed; there will still be storms and pestilence and famine. But his attitude toward it is changed. Instead of making his body and the world over so those difficulties may be removed, the spirit makes the man face them and conquer them, by getting good out of them. When pain and misfortune come, they bring, instead of bitterness and despondency, sweetenings of spirit and renewed faith.

"And to know this, that the spirit has been quickened into life that evil cannot conquer nor disaster overtake, is to possess that peace which man's understanding."

Big Parade of Odd Fellows

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 22.—The annual parade, the spectacular feature of the sovereign grand lodge meeting of Odd Fellows, took place today and was one of the most notable demonstrations of its kind ever seen in Seattle. The procession comprised 10,000 members of the order, half of them in uniform, together with numerous bands of a number of handsome floats. The line of march was profusely decorated with the national colors and the various emblems of the order. Thousands of spectators thronged the streets to witness the procession.

Cotton Manufacturers in Session

Brotton Woods, N. H., Sept. 22.—The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers began its 55th annual meeting here today with a large attendance of members. The initial session was called to order by President Chas. T. Plunkett, and after a little preliminary routine business a speech of welcome was made by Rev. H. P. Quinby.

The convention will remain in session over tomorrow. Many important papers have been prepared. Among the subjects to receive attention are the following: The labor problem in relation to the cotton production; mechanical cleaning of cotton machinery, the commercial values of coal; steam generation for cotton mills; accidents to cotton mill operatives; reinforced concrete for mill construction; starches for mill use, and housing mill employes.

MAY SMOKE DURING SERVICES.

Dayton Pastor Offers Inducement for Men to Attend.

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 22.—To stimulate interest in the afternoon meeting for men, Rev. Thomas W. Cook, rector of St. Andrews' Episcopal Church here, announces that he will permit smoking during services. Invitations have been sent broadcast asking men to attend (the meetings and bring the smoking materials—either pipes or cigars.

"Mr. Cook's congregation is encouraging the movement.
