COTTON SEED MEAL AND HULLS AS A DAILY FEED.

"Corn crib in the west" has, since the civil war, been put forward as the destructive element of the southern cotton planter's welfare.

Certainly there is no harm in planting corn as a supplementary crop; but every cotton planter in the South knows that he has but small chance to make money on a corn crop; and, whatever his well meant resolutions in the winter, when he draws on the wicked Western corn crib, the coming of seed time, awakes in such unflinching cycles his native instinct to plant cotton that to all believers in the divinity of man, cotton planting reveals itself as the logical and inevitable destiny of Southern agriculture.

How then is the chronic and incurable cotton planter to secure his supply of food stuffs? There are two answers: One is to get them just as all North America gets sugar and coffee and tea, that is, make money enough in natural pursuits to buy those articles from countries, which, on account of their climate and other special advantages, can raise them with the greatest profit.

But there is yet another way which enables the cotton planter to plant cotton and to make the cotton plant yield feed at least for his cattle. The whole cotton area is covered with oil mills, where cotton seed meal and hulls are produced in abundance.

It is well known that the principal elements in any kind of complete food are protein, fat and carbohydrates; but it is not sufficiently known among cotton planters that cotton seed products furnish all these elements in the greatest abundance.

Always the most expensive element in any kind of food for man or beast is the protein. Eggs and lean meat are some of the protein yielding foods for men.

Wheat bran is rich in protein, usually containing about 15 per cent and it sells at retail for $1.50 to $1.75 per hundred pounds. Corn, though rich in the cheaper carbohydrates, contains only about 10 per cent protein, and sells for about $2 per hundred. Thus it appears that as a source of protein corn is the most expensive of them all.

Cotton seed meal, which usually contains 40 per cent protein, is richer in this element than any other available feed stuffs, and it sells for about $1.50 per hundred, so it is three or four times as cheap as anything else when considered as a source of protein.

Cotton seed meal is considerably too rich in protein, and too poor in carbohydrates for feeding in its pure in carbohydrates and, thus a proper admixture of these products of the cotton field give a most logical answer to the native feed question. A mixture of cotton seed meal and hulls proportioned to contain 17 per cent protein can be had for $1 per hundred. This perfectly balanced feed furnishes the cheapest nutriment now on the market.

Farmers' organizations are always on the alert to find new markets for the products of their fields. Cotton bage for sugar and flour; cotton bagging for cotton bales, and the traditional extra inch on the Chinaman's shirt, are all laudable ends to this means. Not one of these, yes, not all of them together, can yield a result as practicable and easily attainable as feeding to home animals cotton seed meal and hulls.

GUIDE THE BOYS RIGHT.

The best way of helping a boy is by guiding the use to which he puts his time in childhood and youth. No greater fault could be committed toward any normal boy than to give him nothing to do, to guide him into nothing that would be part of his equipment later on.

It may be said, however, that to these always prominent and desirable attractions have been added, for the current season, many features so stupendous in magnitude, so overpowering in unprecedented grandeur and impressiveness, and so enormous in the expense necessary to this production, that the features mentioned, grand and wonderful as they are, can at best play but a secondary part. Don't forget the date, Tuesday, October 12th.

IT CAN'T BE DONE.

That expression, "It can't be done," shows the capacity of the man who uses it. Such a man who "knows it all" has brags so expanded no earthly being can tell him anything. Such a man is, in reality, the most minute organ of the human race, and until he forgets his superior knowledge, he will never accomplish anything.

It is the so-called fool, the crank that hasn't knowledge enough to know "it can be done" who accomplishes things. He's the man that goes after and does those things the brainy "can't be done" man says, absurd.

What do you suppose were the criticisms when Ben Franklin was making and flying kites to "bring lightning?" I'll assert he was all kinds of a crank, all kinds of a fool such a lunatic as should be caged; but old Ben wasn't smart, he didn't know "it couldn't be done," so the old fool went ahead and did it. The outcome is, electricity.

That's what thousands upon thousands of people have done who haven't enough brains to know "it can't be done."

We are told "All things are possible." Mr. Washington business man are you a "can't be done" man, or are you the man willing to try?

Washington can, with the assistance of others interested, get this railroad through Bath township. No ifs and and's about it, she can get it. She wants it; she should have it. If we do our part we will get it.

You may think the State Council ought not to have made the conditions so rigid, but those conditions can be met, at any rate if the business men of Washington will come together and do all in their power, though we do not reach the goal it might be possible to "split the difference."

Perhaps there are some things about the section the State Council do not know.

Perhaps they didn't mean to construe the resolutions as you see it, so don't lay down, give up the fight, thereby saying, "Come put money in our pockets without our working for it."

If we'll work, we'll win. Let's try. If we say "we can't," we just won't try, and you can't make us.

If we try, and try hard enough, we will win. "The worth the effort." TRY WASHINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

A CURIOUS MAIL ROUTE.

To Go 10 Feet Farther, Must Travel 204 Miles.

One of the most remarkable mail routes in the world is that in which a letter journey is going from Beebe Plain, Va., to Beebe Plain, Quebec, Canada. While the two offices are within 10 feet of each other, are located in the same room, in fact a letter mailed from one office to the other must take a trip of 204 miles.

The plink, old-fashioned store building, which is situated on the international boundary line, contains both the United States and Canadian offices. There are separate entrances to each, but both are in the same building.

If you mail a letter from the Vermont side addressed to the Quebec side, says the postmaster, "it goes from here to the junction and back to Newport, then to White River Junction and back to Lennoxville, Quebec, over the Boston and Maine. There it is transferred to the Grand Trunk and goes to a southbound mail pouch and comes to Stanstead Junction and then back to this same building, a distance of 234 miles.

"If we wish to mail a letter from See our line of chamois skins, 5c to vest size. Hardy's Drug Store.
