WASHINGTON, N. C., OCTOBER 5, 1909.

LET THE NEWS FOLLOW.

Parties leaving town should not fail to let The News follow them daily with the news of Washington fresh and crisp. It will prove a valuable companion, reading to you like a letter from home.

MUST BE SIGNED. All articles sent to The News for publication must be signed by the writer, otherwise they will not be published.

A LAND OF PROMISE.

We publish below extracts from an editorial that recently appeared in the Baltimore News which is good food for thought and reflection.

The solidity of the growth of the South in the last decade was splendidly proved by the fact that it suffered little during the panic which lately engulfed the country. It was well nigh the unanimous testimony from that section that the South's chief cause of complaint was that it had to mark time and wait for the rest of the country to recover from the depression.

The time is approaching when the few farseeing men who predicted an era of prosperity for the country south of Mason and Dixon's line such as has rarely been witnessed bid fair to see their prophecies come true.

For decades the tide of emigration has gone West and North, requiring all the capital and all the energy of the North and East to keep pace with it. The West, with its seemingly unlimited capacity to accommodate settlers, offered the homeseeker the lumberer, the railroad builder and then the trader opportunities which hitherto have satisfied their wildest dreams.

GETTING BUSINESS—STATESVILLE'S EXAMPLE.

It is not so long since North Carolina banks knew nothing of the advantages of advertisement except to publish now and then a sedate card, stating surplus and capital, with the names of the officers and directors. Now, bankers find that the well-managed institution that would increase its business must not only advertise, but advertise according to modern methods.

This comment is suggested by an advertisement appearing in the paper even wider in scope and of better quality than the now established policy of the banks. We refer to mail-order advertising for the liberal expenditure of money in turning the country through high-grade newspapers what a town has and what it wants.

Everywhere capital, expert knowledge, peculiar ability, impatient enterprise are seeking expressions and looking for a field in which to develop. To such interests the mere sight of a live, well-placed, town or city "ad" gives a better conception of the spirit of the place than any quantity of statistical matter, however good, or, however attractively set forth.

In a recent issue of the Atlanta Constitution, we find conspicuously placed at the head of several columns of descriptive matter, the following advertisement, in bold and confident type:

STATESVILLE, N. C. Don't Go to the North Pole But to Statesville, where there is everything to invite—splendid climate and Southern hospitality—26 miles from Salisbury, 44 from Charlotte, and 113 from Asheville; best people; best climate, churches and schools. Population last census 3,100; population now 6,000.

We repeat this "ad" freely, cheerfully and with admiration of the spirit and enterprise that prompted it. The first page of last Sunday's Star carried facts that few Southern cities can rival. Why should those facts and the many others that could be stated, not be judiciously and attractively placed before the public of the country as well as the people of the State? Wilmington is growing. Let us make it grow the faster by shouting about it, if necessary. Let us get the business we need, even if we have to pay for the space with which it can be secured.—Wilmington Star.

A CRISIS IN COTTON.

In one branch of industry the country is facing a peculiar crisis. The situation is certainly unique and will prove rather puzzling to political economists. America is the great cotton producing country of the world, and other countries depend largely upon America for their supply of this raw material. About one-fourth of our annual production has been manufactured here, and three-fourths exported. The home consumption has largely increased during several years past, and the number and capacity of domestic cotton mills have been a notable evidence of our prosperity.

Southern manufacturers declare that unless there is a heavy drop in the price of raw cotton, or a decided rise in the price of cotton fabrics, they will be compelled to close their mills. They do not look for an advance in the price of cotton goods, and if there is a sufficient foreign demand for the raw material at present prices, they can hardly expect a drop in the staple. The situation is peculiar in that if foreign manufacturers can afford to pay the present price for the raw material and the ocean freight to it, and then undersell American factories in the finished product, it will necessitate a readjustment of conditions here.

For Sprains

Sloan's Liniment is the best remedy for sprains and bruises. It quiets the pain at once, and can be applied to the tenderest part without hurting because it doesn't need to be rubbed—all you have to do is to lay it on lightly. It is a powerful preparation and penetrates instantly—relieves any inflammation and congestion, and reduces the swelling.

Sloan's Liniment is an excellent antiseptic and germ killer—heals cuts, burns, wounds and... and will draw the poison from stings of poisonous insects.

their own doors, American manufacturers ought to undersell all other manufacturing countries.

A year or two ago cotton planters were gravely discussing the question of limiting the amount of production for a term of years in order to force a higher price for their product. And now Southern manufacturers, in the heart of the cotton belt, with cheap power and cheap labor, are debating whether or not to limit the output of their factories, confining themselves to manufacturing the stock now on hand, and using little or none of the high-priced raw material.

IN-MEMORIAM.

On the 10th of August, 1909, as the sun in all his radiance and splendor was fast traveling in the eastern horizon, God, in His own wisdom, took unto Himself our beloved friend, Henry A. Windley.

He was born October 12, 1873, making his stay on earth 35 years, 9 months and 25 days. Though not a member of any church, he was a staunch believer and a good worker for the Master's service. Those who knew him could best appreciate his sunny disposition and gentle manner. His health began to fail about four months before his death. While loving hearts and willing hands were ever at his service, and the attention of some of the most noted physicians in Eastern Carolina did all that could be done to restore him to his former health, it was all in vain. An internal cancer had done its work.

He leaves an aged mother, Mrs. J. Ricks, of Pantego, one sister, Mrs. Minnie Ricks, of Pantego, and one brother, Rev. R. R. Windley, of Philadelphia, Pa., and hosts of cousins and friends.

Written by his friend, MRS. M. E. CRARY, Belhaven, N. C.

HAS BEEN CONVERTED.

While Dr. Gallagher was in New Bern he was converted to the fact that other towns in North Carolina have steam whistles that blow from midnight until day besides Washington.

COUNTRY CLUB TEA.

Yesterday afternoon the initial Thursday afternoon tea was served at the Country Club from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. Stephen C. Bragaw, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Hathaway and Miss Nora Angel, received, and poured the tea. Quite a large number of ladies went out and the drive through the beautiful scenery was most delightful. The scenes along the river were never more beautiful than on yesterday and the purple lights on the water were exquisite. These Thursday afternoons promise to be very popular with the social set in town this season.
