THE BACKYARD GARDEN.

It Means Cleanliness, Good Health, and the Civic Spirit.

Great is the virtue of the backyard garden. It is pleasant to note that there have been more gardens in the back yards of Duluth this year than there have ever been before, and it is to be hoped that another year will see twice as many. Without a garden, the back yard is a problem. Waste and dirt accumulate there with a rapidity that passes understanding. Eternal vigilance is the price of a clean back yard, and as the back yard can't be seen from the street, as a rule, the tendency in too many cases is to let the debris accumulate until the health officer is attracted to it by its shocking perfume.

But with a garden taking up all of the hitherto waste space, the problem is solved. The man who starts a garden and gets interested in it isn't going to let tin cans and paper and ashes accumulate in it. He will watch for weeds; and before he knows it he has a profitable and pleasantly productive garden and a clean and signifying back yard. There is health in it, civic spirit in it, profit in it.

There is health because working in the garden brings healing contact with the glorious outdoor air; because the exercise is wholesome and healthful, even if it does bring many a backache at first; and because the earth, to those who till it and come close to its bosom, seems to give forth some mysterious essence of life that makes those who work in it as sturdy as the vegetables whose roots tap its fruitful soil.

There is a civic spirit in it because it does away with the unclean back yard; because it turns waste places into places of comeliness; and because it helps solve the problem of cheap living. There is profit in it for these reasons, and for others; because it helps to furnish the table; because it pays big dividends upon the investment of time and labor; because it feeds the household at the grower's cost when without the back yard garden the furnishings for the table come with the grower's profit added, with the middleman's profit added, and with the retailer's profit added.—Duluth Evening Herald.

VALUABLE SILVER DOLLAR.

Custom decrees that a gold coin, or at the very least silver, shall be put under the mainmast of each new ship launched. The coin bears the date of the year when the vessel is completed, a fact well known to collectors, who keep an eye on ships that are likely to be the depository of numismatic prizes.

At Liverpool some years back, a derelict Yankee schooner was bought for a song, yielding an 1861 dollar, the rarest and most eagerly sought after of all the American coins. It sold readily for 1,500 pounds ($7,500), and would be worth today double that sum at least, for it was in perfect preservation, having rested in its cotton wool bag beneath the hothey stepping of the mast since the day it was first placed in position.

Its recovery was the result of foresight and business enterprise, combined with a special knowledge. A man passing the worthless bulk on the day of the sale noticed the date, 1861, on her stern, and rightly guessed that she might be the bearer of a dollar of that year.—Lewiston Journal.

HOW HE SAVED THE CIRCUS.

Willie Cobb, the circus man, tells this story:

Years ago he was traveling through the South with a wagon tent show and the press agent among other glowing accounts of "what's coming," announced a "herd of 20 camels from the sandy desert of Arabia."

When the show reached town, instead of 20 camels, there was but one sickly camel. Some of the country newspapermen paid no attention to the slight discrepancy, but when Cobb entered the office of a Georgia county editor he was mad enough to fight.

"I saw your parade, sah," said he, "and you lied to our people. I've a good mind to roast you. Where are your 20 camels you made my paper say you've got in your show?"

"I'll tell you how it was," explained Cobb. "When we passed the swamp on the way here it was full of alligators, and without the slightest warning they leaped upon the bank and devoured all but one of the camels. We put up a brave fight, but it was no use."

The editor gazed at Cobb a couple of minutes and then said: "You're a good one. You ought to be a Georgia editor. Come to my house to dinner today. I want to introduce my wife to the biggest liar on earth. She'll be glad to meet you.—Cleveland Press.

HOWE'S GREAT LONDON SHOWS.

The Clowns Are Surprisingly Funny—Every Act a Feature.

Any one of Howe's circus clowns would be the last person in the world you would pick out as a professional jester. He is the soberest appearing man you ever saw on the street. Yet he has but to walk from the dressing top to the big show and you laugh. There is something about that stride that is funny, and when he allows the toy balloon to get away from him and sail through the air, crying after it, with laughter. Now, you let some one else try that same little clown trick the spectators almost fall off the seats and it's not funny at all.

The clown today occupies an even more exalted position with the circus than he did thirty or forty years ago. Years ago they didn't have the colossal acts such as travel with a show of the caliber of Howe's aggregation. Then it was an easy matter to make, or rather arrange, your program so that one act followed another without a wait. Nowadays with the big acts it takes time to get the rigging ready and the clown must during these temporary lulls amuse the spectators so that they will forget all about the wait and watch and laugh.

The clowns of Howe's Great London Shows were all specially engaged for this branch of the performance, and it's the boast of the management that their efforts in this direction have met with a success beyond their expectations.

The big show will be here Tuesday, October 12th.

MOTHER CRAZED IN

DEATH'S PRESENCE.

As he ran to meet his father last night, 4-year-old Jimmie Clowes was killed before his mother's eyes by a Long Island express train at the Norwood avenue crossing, in East New York. Only a moment before he had left his home, 244 Hale avenue, with his mother and his brother Fred, 8 years old.

They reached the crossing just as an electric express train approached. Jimmie saw his father coming from the elevated station, two blocks away, at the same time.

"There's daddy now!" he exclaimed, slipping from his mother's hand. He ran joyfully forward in front of the train.

With a shock that hurled the passengers to the floor, the motorman, Arthur Arkley, stopped his train. He ran back to pick up the child, but the mother already had it in her arms. She was crazed for the moment by shock and grief.

"Oh, look at my little Jimmie asleep!" she cried to the crowd about her. "Isn't he a beautiful child? Please don't wake him up."

The father, half crazed with grief himself, made his way through the crowd. With difficulty he made her relinquish the little body to the police. It was not until later, in her home, that she realized the baby had been killed.—New York World.
