STATE NEWS

Condensed Items of Interest Happening Throughout the State.

George Garfield and Owen Harris, two colored men, who had come to the city yesterday, engaged in a fist-cuff encounter last night near the cemetery. Garfield had been drinking, had said something about Harris' character which he resented, and they proceeded to fight it out, but were stopped by bystanders before either was very badly hurt.—New Bern Journal.

Sterling Wortham, one of the fishermen on the fishing steamer Compton was seriously injured yesterday by falling through the window of the hoisting room. Wortham tried to climb into the donkey-room when the boat gave a sudden lurch and threw him into the machinery in the room. It cannot be ascertained as yet whether the injuries are serious or not.—Southport Herald.

Read the following view expressed by a sensible colored girl in Beaufort the other day: "Yassum, de good men jes' natchully expect de cullud women to support 'em. I've been a steddin' about it, an' it comes of dis-hyer way of tellin' vittles home at night. Dey count on eatin' what de white folks leave, an' it jes' natchully makes 'em wuthless. No'm; if you-all wuz to set dis-here dishpan full of vittles on dis table, I wouldn't tote it home to my man, 'less he was sick."—Beaufort Look Out.

About 2 o'clock this morning Mr. Paroh Bullock and family who reside about four miles from Wilson, had a narrow escape from death when fire totally destroyed the dwelling. The roof was falling in when the fire was discovered, and nothing was saved.—Wilson Times.

Major W. A. Graham, Commissioner of Agriculture, and State Chemist B. W. Kilgore, returned yesterday afternoon from the Edgecombe test farm. They report that the crops are badly damaged from the recent heavy rains that fell in Eastern North Carolina. Cotton and corn will yield only three-fourths of the usual crop.—News and Observer.

The Supreme Court decides that if a fraternal order adopts the resolution admitting some persons to membership and later on, because of alleged false statements by a director of the organization regarding such persons, revoked the resolutions and refuses membership, the organization is not liable to damages.

The police of the city were in a quandary this morning as to whether or not a young white man who was held for beating trains and who gave his name as Dobson Freeman was not an army deserter, and they have been working on the matter all day. If the young man has deserted from the service and can be returned, the government pays the neat little sum of fifty dollars for the task. The young man has the appearance of having been in the service and was clad in an army suit about which he could give no good reason as to how he came into possession of it. The officers feel confident that the man is either traded clothing with a deserter or is one himself.—Rocky Mount Record.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES

For the question, "Why not more marriages?" so ably discussed in the columns of the world by readers, the inquiry, "Why so many divorces?" might be properly substituted.

The World has shown that marriages are many and that they increase in proportion to population. The bureau of labor at Washington has established the fact that divorces in the United States are three times as numerous now as they were a generation ago. There has been no such percentage of increase in population. If to the total of divorces were added the great number of matrimonial shipwrecks falling under the head of abandonment the record would be even more startling.

A woman of good social position who recently secured a divorce did not hesitate to say that most men were inconstant, that they had little interest in their homes, and that they were easily lured by men and women of loose habits of life. Men who have complaints to make against their wives do not usually speak with such freedom, but it is probably true that they could, if they would, present some evidence correspondingly damaging against the other sex.
