Value of Trees in Cities.

There is no well populated country in the world which has so many well wooded towns as Holland. Most of our streets and canal banks have avenues of trees. These shundant growths in thickly populated cities are highly useful and hygienic as well as ornemental. The great European capitals should follow this example.—Hague Handelsblad.

Element of Danger to Society.

The real danger to modern institutions is not in the difference in the size of fortunes or that some live in manalons sed others in huts. The real danger is that the current of sympathy which should circulate freely among the entire-sitizenship is obstructed.
