Girls Learn Farming in Camp—How to Milk Cows, Make Hay and Raise Chickens, is Taught—Rare Skill is Shown in Transformation of Bureau to Show Places and Club Rooms.

Dedicated to the "simple life," a novel camp, most of whose patronesses are college girls and their roomer sisters and brothers, is drawing to the close of a most successful season on the banks of the Pocomoke River at Millot, Md. It was founded by Mrs. Sidney Lanier, Jr., daughter-in-law of the Southern poet, and she has remained the leading spirit throughout. Under her most unostentatious rule the campers have settled into the life of an ideal communitarian group of farmers, and the girls have found health as well as enjoyment in learning how to milk cows, make hay, raise chickens and vegetables, and perform the other duties of the country.

About fifty girls and children have made their home in Camp Lanier throughout the summer. It stretches over fifty acres of ground bordering on the river, and clusters of tents, light frame bungalows and old-fashioned farm buildings are dotted about picturesquely among the trees and on the lawns. The junior boys and girls have camps to themselves, and the older girls also have a reservation set apart for their own special use, while there are in addition five separate family camps, each of which is occupied by a single family. While each part of the community is thus assured of its own legitimate degree of privacy, the campers in their general life are thrown together and share the same amusements and duties.

The section for the older girls consists of a group of tents in one of the prettiest parts of the property, close on the river bank at the far end of Camp Lanier. Here they have their own special club house, which, originally a barn, has been fitted up with rugs and useful furniture, and proves an excellent place for concerts, debates or any other form of entertainment that may be devised. Mrs. Lanier has shown rare skill in turning the previously existing buildings to satisfactory uses and some of the transformations she has wrought have been remarkable. One of the show places of the camp to-day is the building standing in the centre of the grounds, which is known as "The Brooder."

This originally was a hen house, but so one would guess it since it has been changed into a general reception room for visitors. It has been fitted up most tastefully, and, with a full stock of magazines and newspapers and several writing tables in quiet corners, it has become the general meeting place for the whole camp. For those who wish greater quiet there is the "Rest Camp," set in a grove of maples in a remote part of the grounds. Everything is kept in the strictest order. The campers are required to look after their own quarters and every day at stated periods inspectors make the rounds of the little village and hand in reports of all those who are in any way delinquent.

Aristocratic Nuns.

The Duke of Norfolk has two sisters who are nuns; Lady Minna Howard belongs to the Carmelite order and Lady Etheldreda is a Sister of Charity. Lady Edith Fellding, sister to Lord Denbigh, is another Sister of Charity, and spends her days at a convent in Kioi-Kiang, which is in China, as its name indicates. Lady Cristina Bandini, daughter of our Scotch-Italian peer, Lord Newburgh, is a nun in a French convent, and Lady Leopoldina Keppel is a nun of the Sacred Heart. In spite of the fact that she is a sister of a Protestant peer, Lord Albemarle.

Then, Miss Mary and Miss Edith Clifford, sisters of Lord Clifford, of Chudleigh, are both nuns, as are Miss Cicely Arundell, sister to Lord Arundell, and Miss Leonie Dormer, sister to Lord Dormer. Lord Franch, who lives at Johannesburg, has two sisters who are nuns; three Misses Petre, sisters of Lord Petre, are nuns, Lord Herries has no fewer than four sisters who live in convents; and as for Lord Trimlestone, an Irish peer and eighteenth baron, history seems uncertain as to whether four or five of his sisters are nuns, as several of these ladies have not been raised to the rank of baron's daughters. In bygone days there were four sisters of a one-time Lord Camoys who had taken the veil, but most of these ladies are now no more.—Tit-Bits.

FOR LIFTING HOT PANS.

Simple Attachment Which Prevents Accidental Burning of the Hand.

There is no reason why the housewife should be continually burning her fingers lifting hot pans from the fire when she can readily provide herself with the handy attachment shown in the accompanying illustration, and avoid such accidents. It seems impossible to persuade women to use devices similar to this; they would rather use a cloth or their apron when removing vessels from the fire. This "pan holder," nevertheless, should appeal to all women who must work over the fire, being simple in construction and operation. Attached to the handle is a flat circular extension, which is slipped under the pan to be removed. Pivoted to handle is a lever, one end carrying a hook which drops over the edge of the pan. The other end rests against the handle. The lever prevents the pan from slipping, a small ring on the handle being slipped over the end, where it remains until the pan is safely removed and the lever disengaged.

The woman with auburn hair once dark brown and the woman with yellow locks once drab met and complimented each other on the latest color of their coiffure. To the question, "Who did it?" each gave the name of the same hairdresser, but when they compared notes as to price it developed that the former brown haired beauty had had to pay $15 more for the transformation than the yellow haired woman. Animated by an indignation that would not let her rest the highly taxed beauty seker hurried to the hairdresser and demanded an explanation.—The artist in hair was in no wise flustered.

A Hairdressing Secret.

"Yours is not an unusual case," he said affably. "We always charge from $10 to $25 more for dyeing dark hair light because if anything happens to it and it turns green or purple or any undesired shade a jury will always award a dark haired woman higher damages than a blonde. I don't know why all those sets of twelve wise men reason that way but court records show that they do and hairdressers have to fasten one eye on possible jury verdicts before applying the dye."

What the Professor Says.

—From the N. Y. World. Woman is the "great peril" of the race. She is putting man down to her level.

For Small Women.

No matter how small she is, a woman may always have a good figure. If she has not one to begin with, she should economize in some other part of her wardrobe, and call in the services of a good corsetier. If she cannot be impressive, she can at least be neat and good to look at. Use only the straight up and down lines in the development of your garments.

Whatever you do, allow nothing which cuts the figure horizontally. The princess model, which is so much a part of the present mode, should be a cause of rejoicing among small women. Do not wear shirtwaists and skirts of contrasting materials. This cuts the figure in half, and lessens greatly the effect of height. Dispense with belts. If possible, and if not, make them as narrow as possible, and always of the same material as the frock. Coats may be almost any length but that most usual of all, the three-quarter. This is usually fatal. Straight coat seams may be trimmed, but never the lower edge. A trimming there would cut the figure in two.

BEAD FILLETS.

Perfect Neatness and Comfort in Their Use.

Fillets in the hair have almost come to be a necessity with the girl, whose front locks fly in the breeze unless they are restrained in some way. Black velvet fillets—or, indeed, as our mothers called them—have been occasionally seen, but they have not been popular for some reason, in spite of their becomingness; perhaps because they do not seem to adjust themselves well to the pompadour and are apt to make the underpinning, whatever it is, shift from its proper position. Put fillets of bead work are more adjustable and fit over the hair with perfect neatness and comfort. A great many jet beads are seen, jet having been the rage for the past six months, but Indian bead work is immensely popular, used in this way, and these brightly colored beads are seen everywhere at the hotels. They are becoming to most types of blondes and brunettes, but are especially pretty with glossy black hair arranged in neat rolls and coiled in the back. Of course, properly speaking, a fillet goes with a Psyche knot, but Psyche knots are not becoming to every woman in the world, and a head across the forehead from hair is worth a great deal to a girl when the wind is high and she wishes to look her best, whether her hair is knotted low on the neck, coiled on top or arranged with the Psyche.

The jet beads are made for blonde heads of fluffy hair.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE LAUNDRY.

Two yards of rubber sheeting made into a bib apron, bound with white tape, is useful for protecting ones dress on wash-day. It looks neat and wears a long time.

After the curtains are starched take the top and bottom and pin together evenly on the line, then insert a broom or heavy stick through the bottom which will give you straight sides.

When doing up lace curtains, dry them before starching and stretching, as this takes less starch and they look more like new than if you starch them when they are wet, just as they come from the rinsing water.

Housework Apron.

The cut of this attractive housework apron of blue linen is slightly ample and a seam down either side of the front gives it shape. The armhole is very large so that the apron slips on easily.

A little handkerchief pocket adorns the front of the waist. Two buttons are sewn on at the waist line and from them hang a flat holder and a towel. Rather picturesque is the dusting cap of the same blue linen.

Shrieks "Home-Made."

The trouble with most home-trimmed hats is that the inexperienced trimmer does not consider the whole as a definite composition. She does not maintain proper balance between bows and flowers, height and trim. She does not know that the lines of the hat must be carefully considered to attain harmony, and it is this lack of knowledge that leads to such triumphal shrieks "Home-made!"

The automobile woman should bear in mind that mud stains may be sponged from white cloth, when it is inconvenient to clean the entire suit, with a little soapy water and ammonia.

The shoulder scarf is still intensely fashionable. It is so exquisite, so fine, so expensive and so wholly butterfly-like in airy grace and worn with inexpressible art by graceful women.

It's just as important that you clean inside as outside—more so, in fact. Unless your system is entirely changed of all impurities, you cannot be one hundred per cent healthy, physically or mentally. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is the greatest systemic cleanser known. Hardy's Drug Store.
