ROOSEVELT RECKLESS

It is difficult to understand how Col. Roosevelt could be swept by any political campaign in New York into the position he now seems to occupy of utter disregard of either facts or the opinion of others.

In one of his recent Western speeches he said that the Supreme Court was "honest but fossilized of mind."

At Schenectady he said it was "involved in that class of legal subtleties which were the light of the medieval school," and that it clung to "an utterly outworn theory."

Of a Federal Judge, who decided against his contention in the libel suits he entered against two newspapers that printed articles charging fraud in the Panama Canal deal, he said:

"That was the decision of a damn-jackass and a crook. Yes, he is a crook and a jackass, and I said it. This is not confidential."

His assault on the Supreme Court on account of the bake-shop decision was purely for political effect, and the Baltimore Sun says of it:

"The legislature of New York enacted a law prohibiting any contract for more than ten hours' labor a day in bakeshops. This statute was set aside by the Supreme Court because it denied to citizens their free right to sell their labor and to make contracts."

"In delivering the opinion of the court the opinion that Mr. Roosevelt criticizes so freely—Judge Peckham said:

"It is manifest to us that the limitation of the hours of labor, as provided for in this section of the statute, under which the indictment was found and the plaintiff in error convicted, has no such direct relation to and no such substantial effect upon the health of the employe as to justify us in regarding the section as really a health law. It seems to us that real object and purposes were simply to regulate the hours of labor between the master and his employe (all being men, sui juris) in a business not dangerous in its nature to morals or in any real substantial degree to the health of the employe. Under such circumstances, the freedom of master and employe to contract with each other in relation to their employment and in defining the same cannot be prohibited or interfered with without violating the Federal Constitution."

"This opinion has been published by the newspapers, and Mr. Roosevelt's attention was directed to the fact that this decision does not impair the right of any state to make bakeshops and all other shops sanitary."

"Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt, with all these facts in his possession, made a speech at Schenectady a few days ago reiterating his statement that the Supreme court had denied, in the bakeshop case, the right of a state to correct unsanitary conditions in workshops.—Ledger Dispatch.

"Neither did he collect a campaign fund from the money-changers."

"The five graduates of Carlisle Indian School who alone of 514 living graduates refuse to work no doubt boast of an exceptionally pure Indian blood."

Mr. Roosevelt continues to insist that the Outlook be substituted for the Constitution of the United States.

BUILDING OF GOOD ROADS

Suggestions For the Treatment of Rural Highways.

NO PATCHWORK WHATSOEVER

The Work to Be Done in Sections—A Mile Should Be Carefully Finished in Its Entirety—How the Roadway Ought to Be Cared For.

How good roads should be made and how they should be cared for is tersely described in the Iowa Homestead by an enthusiast, who says:

In the first place, there should be no patchwork roadmaking having for its object only to make one particular spot passable. Road work should be done in sections. For instance, a mile of road should be taken and completed in its entirety. Every inch of it should be made a good and safe road. I venture the assertion that not more than one mile of road in every ten is safe or free from some dangerous trap to cause trouble to careless drivers or those not given to close observation of the roadways. They should be made so that a child might safely drive over them.

Beginning, I would establish a reasonable grade so that no steep hills remain when the work is finished. I would make over the entire width of the road from fence to fence. I would make the actual roadway of usual width, with only rise enough in the center to shed rain. From the gutter at the side of this roadway I would make a smooth and even grade to the fence line. Then I would compel the property owners along the road to keep the roadside well set in grass and to mow and care for it just as they do their meadows. No deep, unsightly and dangerous gullies would be permitted, and the man who scraped a lot of grass, weeds, clods and trash into the center of the road should at once be condemned to penal servitude for life. Capital punishment would be too good for the one who scoured his plow in the road.

The road worker who plowed up a stretch of road late in the fall and left it to mellow up until spring should be banished to roadless Siberia. A plow has no place in any road that has once been properly made. The care of a road made according to my plan would be only that of going over it occasionally with a drag. The occasion for the use of the drag, however, should be from the viewpoint of the need of the road and not the convenience of the operator of the drag. No man would be permitted to drive a drag over a road unless he were a licensed graduate of a roadmaking school. A road drag is a dangerous thing (for the road) in the hands of a man who does not have sense enough to use it.

I would build a complete and effective drainage system to take care of the water that finds its way to the road—not a guesswork one, but one planned by a drainage engineer who knew how.

I would make culverts and bridges the width of the road. No small culverts should be built. They invariably fill up and require a damage. A good, big concrete bridge is the safest and cheapest that can be made.

Flat Roads Versus Convex. Flat roads, as opposed to those of convex section, are recommended in the London board of trade traffic report as leading to minimize the splashing of pavements with mud.

Both are evils, when they are wife awful mud."

"What are they?" "To get roads for company that doesn't come, and to have company come when she best needs it."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOLDSBORO HEARD FROM

A Lady Who Lives in Goldsboro Joins in the Chorus of Praise for Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Goldsboro, N. C.—"A physician treated me for many distressing symptoms," writes Mrs. Etta A. Smith, "but gave me no relief."

"I suffered with neuralgia around the heart and was troubled at times with my head. I had pain in my left side, bowels, left thigh, shoulders and arms."

"After taking Cardui, I am now well and can recommend it to other suffering women."

Just such doubtful symptoms, as those from which Mrs. Smith suffered, are the ones for which it will pay you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is at such times, when there is nothing to show, for certain, the real cause of the trouble, that you need a tonic, to give the body strength to throw off the illness that evidently threatens.

Take Cardui, when you are ill, with the ailments of your sex. Take Cardui as a tonic, to prevent illness, when you feel it coming.

Your druggist keeps it. R. H. Smith, Dr. J. H. Smith, Dr. C. M. Smith, Dr. W. H. Smith, Dr. J. W. Smith, Dr. J. E. Smith, Dr. J. B. Smith, Dr. J. C. Smith, Dr. J. D. Smith, Dr. J. F. Smith, Dr. J. G. IT GETS LATE EARLY

One lonesome bee lags to the hive On stiffened and rheumatic wings. The frost-bitten cricket, half alive, Creaks out the swan-song that it sings.

The wind-tossed withered blade and husk, There one lorn cornstalk feebly sways

Are crackling dirges in the dusk— It gets late early nowadays.

The cat is whining at the door, The dog will whimper, too, ere long;

An undertone of winter's roar Comes in the breeze's trestled songs; Bare boughs are lifting here and there,

The afternoon dies in a haze, A subtle warning thrills the air— It gets late early nowadays.

The whistle of the distant train Is shrilly chill across the miles, The children's shouts are very plain And sudden in the silent whiffles

Of this calm, lazy autumn time; All unexpected on their ways The glinting stars begin to climb— It gets late early nowadays.

The clucking chickens seek their rest, The street lamps flare out in surprise,

The drifting clouds against the west Gleam with a myriad gorgeous dyes, The maple leaves turn richer gold,

The woodbine has a crimson blaze, The grape leaves crumple up and fold— It gets late early nowadays.

A sense of sadness and content; A mingled sense, that makes us ask

What time the dancing summer went And whence this dull, half-mystic mask

The day draws on—this comes to us, And half in dream and half in daze Into ourselves we murmur thus: It gets late early nowadays.

—W. D. Nesbit, in Chicago Post.

CONSCIENCE.

Conscience is just ce's best minister. It threatens, promises, rewards and punishes and keeps all under its control. The busy must attend to its remonstrances, the most powerful submit to its reproaches and the angry endure its upbraidings. While conscience is our friend all in peace, but if once offended farewell to the tranquil mind.—Mary Wroley Montagu.
