Important Meeting.

It will be interesting to the friends and Alumni of the State Normal and Industrial College of Greensboro, N. C., to know that there will be a meeting of the Beaufort county branch of the Alumni Association of this institution at the home of Mrs. Junius D. Grimes, tomorrow, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Business of importance is to be transacted, and a full attendance is, therefore, desired.

THE FIRST TASTE
Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water."

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee affected my parents that they had roasted wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee mill, as a substitute for coffee."

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence."

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous."

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted."

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headache. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

LET FOR THE MORNING LIGHT ON MORSE FINANCE

Financier Now in Federal Prison is Declared to Have Invented his Peculiar System of Using Bank's Money.

New York, Nov. 9.—In the suit brought by John W. McKinnon, agent for the stockholders of the National Bank of North America in New York, against the Continental Finance Company to recover upon a note made by the company to its own order and discounted by the bank for the sum of $60,000, some new light was thrown on the intricacies of the Morse school of finance yesterday before Judge Hand and a jury in the United States Circuit court.

Counsel for the defendant, J. H. Dougherty, made some interesting statements in outlining the story of the note.

From his remarks it appears that Morse was not the sole originator of the system which resulted in the downfall of the bank. Morse was convicted and sentenced for using the moneys of the bank in the purchase of ice and steamship stock and making false entries in its books to conceal these facts from the Comptroller of the Currency. It appeared from Mr. Dougherty's opening that Morse was the inheritor and continuer of a system that had its beginning earlier. At that time gentlemen of standing and wealth and politicians of eminence were stockholders and directors of the bank. Before Morse's time said Mr. Dougherty, the bank appeared to have invested some of its moneys of depositors in the purchase of large blocks of railroad and industrial stocks, some of which they sold at a profit.

Counsel asserted that by means of this class of purchases the bank, according to its reports, in one year made a dividend of 36 per cent. for stockholders. He asked the jury if any bank, by the loan of money and discount of paper, ever made any such profit.

He thought that the profits must have come from purchases and sales of railroad and industrial securities.

The testimony of Thomas Sturgis, President of the Continental Finance Company, doing a banking business at No. 25 Broad street, explained how the bank happened to have the note of the company for $60,000. Morse approached Sturgis and others of the finance company and asked them to go into an ice pool with him and some of his friends. They were to give him a check for $7,000, which would be the only money they would have to advance. But as a memorandum of their interest in the pool they were to give him a nominal note for $60,000. This was to be considered merely in the light of a memorandum and was not to be paid. They were to receive and transfer to the bank 1,000 shares of ice stock. When the pool was wound up the notes were to be accounted for, having been renewed from time to time. They understood that he was not to discount it, though no such agreement was ever made.

The note was made by the company to its own order. Soon after it was given Sturgis heard that it was in the hands of the National Bank of North America in New York, and he went over to see Mr. Curtis, the president of the bank, about it. The company was depositor at bank with understanding it was to be accounted the note and that Morse had understood that it was to be accommodated with loans, and Sturgis did not want the borrowing ability of the company at the bank reduced by the note.

Curtis assured him that it would not be, and so did Morse. He did not know then that the bank had discounted the note and that Morse had received $60,000 on it.

In June, 1908, Sturgis heard Mr. Morse was going abroad, and as the note would mature in August, he went to see Morse again. The latter told him that he could renew it then. In the mean time a photograph of ice stock had been transferred to cover the stock, though the Finance company never saw the stock. When the note came due in August a new note was sent over by the Finance Company and the old one was returned to them.

The bank went into the hands of a receiver. The receiver found the piece of paper in the hands of the bank. It is on this paper, which the Finance Company says was only a memorandum and for which it never received any return, that the plaintiff is trying to collect $60,000 with interest.

SECRET OF LIVING.
If we can only come back to nature together every year and consider the flowers and the birds and confess our faults and our mistakes under the silent stars and hear the river murmuring in absolute we shall die young even though we live long, and we shall have a treasure of memories which will be like the twin flower, a double blossom on a single stem, and carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal.—Henry van Dyke.

Don't Wait.
A paper devoted to country life remarks that "spring is the best time of the year to move here."
It may be. But if a low ceiling on your neck or any other portion of your anatomy in the fall don't wait until the spring to move it. There is a good reason why you should move now. It is the best time to move. It is the best time to move. It is the best time to move.

WASHING TUBS
These cold mornings won't set you shivering—have no terrors for you—if you have a gas radiator in your room connected with our mains and your own house feed pipes. Turn the cock, strike a match and just feel your apartment grow comfortable in a trice. When you're dressed you can shut off the gas, so getting heat for a few cents. Ask us how.
