ADDING DAYS TO HIS LIFE
Paradoxical Problem is Solved Through Obvious Point in Circumnavigation.

A correspondent sends to the Herald a paradoxical problem which, he believes, originally appeared in Plesner's "Chymical, Natural and Physical Magic," published some 60 years ago. Two persons were born at the same place, at the same moment of time. Fifty years after they both died, also at the same spot and at the same instant; yet one had lived 100 days more than the other.

The possible solution turns on a curious but very obvious point in circumnavigation. A person going round the world toward the west loses a day; going toward the east he gains one. Suppose, then, two persons born together at the Cape of Good Hope, whence a voyage round the world may be performed in a year; if one performs this constantly toward the west, in 50 years he will be 50 days behind the stationary inhabitants; and if the other sails equally toward the east, he will be 50 days in advance of them. One, therefore, will have seen 100 days more than the other.—Glasgow Herald.

Seafaring Races.
The portraits of Captains Amundsen show a certain likeness to Dr. Nansen. Both have in a marked degree the long narrow skull of the Vikings. It is a curious circumstance that the seafaring races, whether on the Baltic or on the Mediterranean, have this type of head, while the inlanders of Europe are predominantly of the broad headed Alpine sort.

But it will hardly do to make long headedness the cause of seamanship, as some enthusiasts have done, for the Japanese, who are round headed, take readily to the sea.

Rub-My-Tism will cure you.

CRAB'S WALK OF 90 MILES

Some remarkably interesting details regarding the movements and the homing instinct of the edible crab were presented to the Eastern Sea Fisheries Committee. During the past two years Fishery Inspector J. Donnan has been carrying out investigations on behalf of the committee, and the results of his work cannot fail to be of considerable use to those concerned in zoological research.

In the course of an extensive report he stated that between July and September, 1915, nearly two thousand crabs were captured and many being labeled were again set free along the Norfolk and Lincolnshire coasts. The crabs had healthy green gills, shells, and claws were clean in process of moulting.

Rewards were paid to fishermen upon returning the crabs when recaptured. They were returned to the sea at varying distances from the shore, and up to the present $1 per crab of the labeled crustaceans had been recaptured and full data tabulated.

With regard to the Norfolk crabs liberated in the places from which they were originally obtained, fifty-two were recaptured within one mile of their first home, but one traveled as far as Flamborough Head, a distance of ninety-eight statute miles. Nearly three hundred had traveled only three or four miles from where they were originally taken.—London Standard.

MARK GRAVE OF HEROINE
Clubwoman to Preserve Memory of Woman Who Gave Life to Help Smallpox Sufferers.

Clubwomen, assisted by the doctors of North Billerica, Mass., are taking steps to preserve the memory of Sarah Hodgman, who gave her life more than a century ago in her efforts to help neighbors who were suffering from smallpox. It happened during the smallpox epidemic in 1811. On learning that a family of four persons with two guests were ill with the disease, and had no one to help them, Miss Hodgman, against the protest of her family and friends, entered the infested house and did all in her power for its inmates.

Within two weeks it was noticed that the customary sneeze did not curl from the chin. Some of the townsfolk finally mustered up courage to investigate. It was found that the entire household, Sarah Hodgman included, had died of the disease. It is now proposed to erect a monument in the place of the old gray headstone which marks her grave.

Honesty in Advertising.
Honesty in advertising is a policy as well as a moral necessity was the theme of an address delivered to the Springfield Ad Men's club by Andrew N. Fox of Chicago. "There is only one better way to incur a man's enmity than by calling him a fool," Mr. Fox said, "and that is by treating him like a fool on the surmise that he doesn't recognize the treatment. You can't fool the people in advertising."

ROASTING
There is a difference between meat roasted in a GAS oven and that by any other method.

"The lower oven is used for all roasting purposes and broiling, the upper oven for baking purposes, both ovens being heated at the same time and with the same flame.

The oven must be heated previous to roasting, the same as for broiling—ten minutes full heat. Turn meat frequently (leaving door open) until each side is seared. Then place roast lower down in the oven, add seasonings and begin basting with the fat which drips into the pan. The oven flame may also be reduced, and as a rule the front burner will do all the work after the preliminary browning of the surface. Red meats so roasted taste more like the old-fashioned roast before an open fire, than when cooked in any other manner. Not a drop of water is required for basting if there be a proper amount of fat, and the heat be moderate after basting is begun.

Just try a roast on your GAS Range and following all the instruction and you will have the finest piece of roast beef you ever tasted.
