professions are recruited from the ranks of college men. But, we are guilty of gross neglect in clinging to a system of training that is highly exclusive and undemocratic. We must make our educational system as well as our government a democracy, whose benefits will accrue to every last individual. Education must not only concern itself with the achievement of the past but with the needs of the present. It must send out into the world trained men who will not have to wait through a period as long as their school or college course to learn actually how to do things. They have 45,000 agricultural schools in France, every one of them with a little plot around it, where they not merely teach boys out of books but send them to the field to learn what must be done to make things grow under the smile of God; the result is that France is the greatest producer and the greatest creditor.

The nomination will be Thursday, June 26th.

TO INCREASE SIZE OF STORE.

Messrs. Russ Brothers have started preparations for the enlarging of their store on West Main street. It is planned to increase it about forty feet in length. The present size of the store is too small for the large stock of goods which is kept there.

The Art of Dressing.

There is nothing that bolsters up self-respect and creates self-confidence like the feeling of being well-dressed. Certain of correct personal appearance, most men will approach any person or situation of an ill-cut coat or a gaping collar, they will often quail before the observant stare of a street urchin.

To dress well and obtain this feeling of confidence is an art. To accomplish it on a limited income requires unceasing vigilance. Carefulness in expenditure obtains infinitely better results than recklessness. "Look before you buy" should be the motto of every thrifty man and woman.

The kind of looking that helps the most in the shortest time is the careful reading of advertisements in the better class newspapers. They will answer for you these vital questions:

What?

Where?

When?

How much?

TURKEY GOBBLER HATCHES BROOD OF 16 CHICKENS.

When His Mate Went to "Setting" He Followed Suit and Placed "Tole to Finish."

Elizabeth City, N. C., June 18.—Weldon Moseley's turkey gobbler has hatched a brood of sixteen chickens. The gobbler became lonesome when his mate left him some weeks ago to hatch out a brood of turkeys. He strutted around for several days and then he, too, went to "setting." He was driven off his nest several times, but finally J. C. Perry, a rural mail carrier, bought sixteen eggs and put them under the gobbler, just to see if he would sit on them until they were hatched.

The gobbler stuck to the job to the end and now he has a healthy looking brood. To say that he is proud of them would be putting it mildly. He will fight for his flock like a setting hen. Moseley's wife went out to look after the chicks yesterday and she attempted to take one away. The gobbler flew at her like a setting hen and inflicted some painful injuries before he was subdued. Now Moseley and his wife do not dare to touch the little chicks.

This is the first time in the history of this section that a turkey gobbler was ever known to assume the role of a hen.

AT 91 HE'S ON SEVENTH LAP AROUND THE GLOBE.

New York, June 18.—Of the many saloon passengers on the Atlantic transport liner Minnehaha last night, none stepped down the gangplank with a spryer step than did Capt. J. M. Peebles of Vermont, Cal. and all the rest of the world. The Captain is now on his seventh lap around it. He is ninety-one and has taken up circumnavigation as a fad. He expects to resume his journeyings just as soon as he can get rested up a bit.

On the voyage from London at the request of the passengers he gave a lecture on hygiene. He let them know that although he was a surgeon in the civil war he did not believe in drugs as a method of preserving health or prolonging life. He expects to prolong his years to a hundred or more on a vegetable diet and an abstinence from whiskey.

The captain said when twenty-eight years of age he had been overtaken by tuberculosis and had gone to California from Vermont to rid himself of the disease. He was accompanied on this trip by his son, a youth of forty.

SPELDER FROM ROOF WAS A STUFFED SUIT.

Boys' Joke Halts Traffic, Women Faint and Police Phone Bells Ring.

New York, June 17.—In answer to excited telephone calls that a man had jumped from the roof of a five-story flat house, at the northeast corner of One Hundred and Forty-third street and Seventh avenue, last night, four patrolmen rushed out of the Lenox avenue police station.

They found the streets at that point choked with automobiles, carriages and pedestrians, all shouting and pointing upwards.

Seeing a human figure swinging at the end of a rope attached to the eaves, the policemen climbed to the roof. They found the "suicide" was an old suit of clothes filled with straw. The discovery revived several women who had fainted. Lieut. Ashley, who received dozens of hysterical telephone calls at the police station, said small boys tossed the dummy from the roof.

EDUCATION THAT FITS FOR LIFE

(By Rev. E. A. Lowther, A. B., B. D., President of the Washington Colleague Institute.)

Education can no longer be confined to any one type of culture or be restricted to a knowledge of the classics. It includes these but also a great deal more. Once it was education for the humanities, now it is education for humanity. It must concern itself with the improvement of the individual and society; nothing human can be foreign to education. The world itself is a school room and nature and human nature are the sources from which we learn. We look upon the school and college as a means to an education; they are not the end but only powerful factors in the improvement of the individual, tools to be employed in shaping life, making character and destiny.

MR. LOWTHER.

This is often criticized as an age of materialism and many call for an education that takes men away from the material to the spiritual. But we must not forget that that which is first is natural and then that which is spiritual. There is and should be no real antagonism between the material and the spiritual, the economic and the religious life. The one should contribute to the other. Education owes a debt to the economic improvement of our country and if it does not discharge that debt, it is recreant to its trust. The resources of the country do not spontaneously come into existence. They belong to us only as we are trained in the art of production. The United States had in its soil, its rivers and lakes, its forests and mineral wealth just as much possibilities when the swamps roamed through its woods, followed the line of least resistance in picking up a livelihood. The nation is richer today than it was then because it is richer in trained men. Men and not commodities or things are the nation's chief asset. The problem, therefore, is the improvement of the human being and all other things material shall be added unto us. A few years ago vast stretches of our western country presented nothing but sage brush or desert soil; today those western deserts are made to blossom as the rose. But this did not just happen. It was brought about by a better knowledge of the tools of production. The south gives promise of being the richest section of our land, but this new south is to be the outcome of trained men in every sphere, trained to till the soil and make it reach its maximum level of production. Just as a matter of dollars and cents education offers the most profitable field of investment. If one expects to earn he must also be willing to learn. The economic aspect of education is demanding serious attention on every hand today. We must have agricultural education to keep the country boy on the farm, to stem the tide of immigration that has been flowing so irresistibly and also so disastrously toward the city. We have been training so many to be consumers that now, we must whether we want to or not, train as many to be producers or there can be no solution to the problem of the high cost of living. Industrial training is also needed in the city for the boy who does not go on to higher education. This kind of education helps the youth to solve the practical problems of a livelihood in the most efficient manner. It is no time to spin fine educational theories but to do something to help the 95 out of a 100 children who do not go on to High School from the grammar grades and the 97 out of a 100 who do not go from the High School to the College. We do not say anything against the college bred man; the more of that kind we have the better. The few who have had the privilege of higher training, furnish the nation its supply of the positions of highest responsibility. The
