WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, OCT. 4, 1915.

One of the pet sports of the paragraphers these days is to take some prominent man's name and make all kinds of puns out of it. However, we believe they'd have a hard time with that fellow whose name appeared in a recent issue of the Berliner Anzeiger. It was Herr Toztoslafenladenspiegel.

All things don't come to him who waits. For example, the poenever has found a rhyme for "window," "wolf" or "silver" in the

"It is very difficult at times," comments the Greenville Reflector "for a fellow to make himself believe that Sunday is a rest day. If you should come over to Washington some Monday and see the number of colored gentlemen up before the recorder you'd very much believe that Sunday was arrest day.

LACK OF PUBLIC SPIRIT.

Just to show that they are not going to be held back by Wash ington's lack of progressiveness and enterprise, Aurora and Belhaven both are going to have a big agricultural fair this fall. Prepara tions are under way and both events will, in all probability, prove a credit to the cities in which they are to be held.

Why efforts were not made to have a general county fair in thi city is more than we can understand. There appears to be juone logical excuse-and that is that our citizens haven't the gump tion or the aggressiveness to tackle something that requires some work and some of their time.

Aside from the educational and agricultural benefits of a count fair, the commercial value of the event alone should be inducement enough for our citizens to show some interest in it. A fair in Washington would bring thousands of visitors here during fair week it would give the city advertisement all over this section of the State and it would increase the business of our local merchants. All this is lost to us because there is no one to take enough interest in the Aurora and Belhaven are to be congratulated upon their public spirited citizens, who have the welfare of their communities at heart. It is too bad that some of them can't come to Washington to live and spread some of their enthusiasm here. They are badly needed.

Not only in the matter of a county fair, but in other work as well, are Belhaven and Aurora leading Washington. They are building bridges and roads, improving their streets and interesting themselves in the work of developing the sections surrounding them. Washington became greatly agitated over the "good roads" ment, about two months ago, but since then not one shovel of dirt has been turned in improving the roads in the vicinity of this city. We're asleep; that's what we are-asleep!

Considerable comment has been heard lately over the next and attractive appearance of the property south of the court house. The grass is kept cut, and cannons have been planted along the side of the court house and along the rear fence. The improvement is evi dent to everyone who happens to go along Market street. More could be done, however, and it is hoped that the county will not res satisfied with what they have accomplished. A few loads of dirt, to level it off, some good grass-seed, to make a lawn, a number of flower-beds and a few benches, and they could form as pretty little park as could be desired.

A Chicago physician advises the wives of snoring husbands to report them to the board of health, but we are not told what the boards of health is expected to do with them .- Virginian-Pilot.

READING EDITORIALS.

Various editorials have recently appeared in a number of paper on "the editorial," and discussions have ensued as to whether the editorial columns are read by the majority of readers. The general opinion appears to be that if an editor selects good, live topics for his editorials his writings will be read, but if he delves into subjects that have no interest for his readers, or if he is merely trying trying to write "an essay," he might as well save himself work and fill his column up with patent medicine advertisements,

The choice of subjects, however, does not make the editorial page interesting. A great deal depends upon their treatment. Two of the big State papers recently carried editorials on the same sub-One was a quarter of a column in length, and the other was two columns. It would be a safe bet to say that ten men read the first, where one man read the second. Brevity, according to the best editorial writers in the country today, is the most important thing to be taken into consideration, after the theme of the editorial has been selected.

When it comes to considering subjects for the editorial, there is not question but that local matters are of the greatest interest. Especially is this true of the smaller papers. When foreign matters are dealt with, most readers prefer that they be just as brief as it is possible to make them.

We believe that the editorial pages of the papers in this section of the State are as bright and interesting as it is possible to make thm. The reason for this is probably that the editors realize the value of a good live editorial and are willing to take the trouble and the pains to think up a good one. There is no doubt but that their writings are read with interest and appreciation.

A BUSINESS ASSET.

Noting that at one university in this country more than four hun dred students have been carelled in the Spanish classes, the Moni-gemery Advertiser is moved to remark: "This is a sensible educa-tional development; it is American deatiny to be more and more in-terested in the Spanish speaking countries to the South of us. 11 is well for educated Americans to know the tengue of their neigh-

Even so, but more than that, the consular agents and comrepresentatives of the Washington Government in the South and Central American republics, men who speak from personal and first-hand knowledge of the subject, have for years been telling us that hand knowledge of the subject, have for years been taking us knowledge of Spanish is one of the essentials to success in expanding our trade in the Latin-American territories. In this view of the esse, the importance becomes manifest of not confining the traching of the language to our higher institutions of learning, but of incorporating it in the curricula of our public schools. This Norfolk did some three or four years ago, and other cities, particularly in the South, have taken on a symptom to take aimilar action.—Vie. #### COUNTY FAIRS.

Within the past year there has been a notable increase in the number of county fairs in North Carolina. Noarly all the towns are now so equipped and some that have not yet been able to raise are now so equipped and some of grounds and equipping them sufficient morey for the purchase of grounds and equipping them with buildings, are having resort to the scattered exhibit on streets and in stores. The most successful fair of the kind was started in Winston-Salem some years ago! The county fair of the present is a far ore useful institution than the fairs of past periods, when they were looked on merely as gathering places for various forms of amusement, including some forms of questionable character. The county fair is now regarded as an educational institution and one that inspires emulation and rivalry among the farmers. Theoretically inended for their benefit, it is now made beneficient in practice. Having undergone such an evolution, the county fair is now regarded as a thing worth while, a worthy aspiration for every town and deserving of the support of county and town alike.-Charlote Ob

THE COMMUNITY NURSE.

"The city authorities of New Bern employ a trained nurse who special duty it is to visit, instruct, and assist in the care and trea: acnt of tuberculosis cases," says the University News Letter.

"Goldsboro and Statesville also have visiting community nurses "Why leave a beneficience of this sort to civic authorities or secu ar organizations?

"What lovelier thing could the churches of all denominations in any city do than to unite in supporting a trained nurse or two for the free use of families who cannot afford $25 a week for a private

"Our churches may differ upon doctrine, but they can be one oundation in deeds of social service. Why not?"
"We echo the query of our friend," says the Wilmington Dispatch.

"Yes, why not? To those who would answer in the negative or doubt, we could combat the former and remove all dubiousness of the latter by citing the experience of Wilmington. This community has for a long time had a district nurse, a graduate nurse and one of the best, who has done this work, being backed by an organization, and several months ago another trained nurse was placed in the field by the health department. So with this combination we believe Wilmington can claim to be the leader in this fine work, though there is glory enough for all."

As one of the earlier communities in this field of merciful, and at the same time profitable work, Greensboro is always gratified to note its extension.-Greensboro News.

THE THEATRES.

"Who Closed Your Theater?" is the title of an article in the October McClure's in which it is stated that in the cities of the West, Middle West and South, ranging from 15,000 to 200,000 population, nearly 200 theatres and opera houses, the principal places of amusement in the communities, are boarded up and abandoned.

The theatrical syndicate managers of New York attributes this to the movies and the hard times, but the writer in McClure's takes a different view and puts the blame upon the character of the shows that in the past few years have been sent out in these sections.

There is no doubt of the fact that the tone of the modern player has been slowly dropping until it is no longer surprising to have city authorities actually prohibit a production. Theatrical syndicates that would send out plays in which common decency was challenged had no right to expect anything but a final protest from the Salacions shows that may have appealed to the vitiated taste of the Broadway revellers were not the kind to present to the cleanminded people of the smaller communities; and the results are the natural protest that outraged modesty made. People are still willing to pay to see good actors and actresses in decent performances and the theaters may remain boarded up until such plays are offered them.-Ledger Dispatch.
