WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, NOV. 3, 1916.

The general sentiment expressed at the Belhaven fair yesterday was: "Aurora will have to go some to beat this!" And Aurora WILL have to go some! The Belhaven fair was a wonder. It showed what a progressive people can do when they get started. It took a lot of work to get up an exhibit like that but those who gave their time and labor to it, do not regret the efforts spent. It was a fair of which any community might well feel proud and by next year the citizens of that section promise something that will eclipse all past fairs ever held in this county.

COMMUNITY LOYALTY.

Have you ever stopped to consider the fact that loyalty to community interests is the highest type of patriotism? Show us the man who is loyal and true to every interest of his own community and we will show you in that same individual a man in whom his country can repose absolute confidence in any emergency that calls for his allegiance.

On the other hand, the man who is careless and unconcerned for the interests of his community is more than apt to display the same spirit of indifference toward his government or his state should any serious danger threaten either.

One of the most commendable traits of the old Scotch highlanders was their loyalty to their own clan. Good or bad, right or wrong, the clan had their first allegiance. The life and services of each member were always cheerfully placed at the disposal of the clan.

Try to imagine an entire state composed of innumerable communities welded and cemented into a symmetrical whole, each striving to excel the others, but each, from its own local loyalty, developing a broader and deeper loyalty that reaches out and embraces the whole.

Utopia, you say? By no means. Merely what could and would be the result if we could only be brought to see that we owe allegiance to our own people, but that the prosperity of others is in no wise a detriment to us, but rather a help; that if each community would develop itself to the utmost—physically, mentally and morally—none would need to be envious of others, neither would any need do ought to detract from another's interests.

Let us develop community loyalty to the full—the highest possible form of patriotism.

THE BOY, OR THE HOG.

For some weeks now farmers all over the states and counties have been flocking to the local fairs, some to exhibit to the public the results of their efforts and others to see and observe and profit by the results achieved by their fellows.

Among the many attractions to be seen at these fairs is the inevitable big fat hog. His hump usually tips the beam around one thousand pounds, and we stand and marvel at the labor and patience it must have required to develop such swinish perfection.

Then if we are thinking men our thoughts will probably pass on to wonder if the owner of this marvel has as much of his own, and as to how great an effort he is making to develop them to the highest type of which they are capable of attaining. The hog's owner has been careful to eliminate from its progenitors all that would tend to take from its full and complete development. Has he been just as careful to weed out of his own life habits and traits of character that would militate against the development of his own?

Often we have seen a boy succeed in life despite the shortcomings of a derelict father, and we have contented ourselves with the simple remark that the boy is a great improvement on the father. The tribute is weak and paltry. Little do we know of the fight the boy has waged in order to rise above his surroundings and overcome his handicaps.

Environment is mighty and powerful for good or evil. The greatest blessing a boy can have is parents who can point and guide him toward higher things—higher heights even than these to which they have attained.

At the risk of seeming to preach we wish to say to the fathers of this section that when you look upon the big hog you have seen the ultimate. Nothing further is obtainable unless, possibly, it be a little more of the same porcine perfection. But when you look upon your small son, how little you can see of the limitless possibilities for good and ill that lie in that small mind and heart, and how your care of him is going to mould his life into almost whatever you may wish to make it!

Why not think less of the big hog and more of the small boy?

A RURAL PICTURE.

The joys—the benefits—of rural life are the subject of poetic word pictures by Howard Goldsmith of New York. With a photo of his old Dutch stone farm house in Rockland county, that state, built 200 years ago, showing a lake around which frolic his five children, he issued the following convincing exhortation:

And this little lake are five reasons why we live in the country. There are other reasons, but like this picturesque old house, they are a background.

On the farm these children are near enough to town and city to enjoy all the essential benefits of both.

They have advantages that neither the town nor the city can supply. They are learning to work with their hands and to see what they look at.

They are getting ideas and finding how to put them into effect. They observe the creative forces of Nature, getting fundamentals on which character and industry are built.

And it's all so interesting, they don't realize that they're being schooled.

In the city a family in three generations runs out. The tendency is to pattern—to copy, slavishly, a standard model.

The country encourages differentiation and originality. It breeds new types. To prevent his crops running out, the farmer practices rotation—and to preserve the virility of the race. Nature implants an urge for the land.

It's a healthy condition and impulse, and without it we would die at the top.

If you can live in the country for even a part of the year, it will be good for you.

And if you have children, it may be the best, cheapest and biggest thing you can do for them.

YESTERDAY
I WENT down.
TO THE Belhaven fair.
AND MET a lot of people.
AND HAD the biggest kind.
OF A good time.
AND THE exhibits were fine.
AND I saw Fred Latham.
AND JOHN Tooley.
AND OLD Man Snyder.
AND A lot of other folks.
AND EVERYBODY was praising THE LADIES' exhibit.
AND I went up to see it.
AND MRS. Way.
EXPLAINED EVERYTHING.
AND IT was.
AWFULLY INTERESTING.
AND I was having the.
FINEST KIND of a time.
UNTIL WE came to the.
CULINARY EXHIBIT and saw.
ALL OF THE preserves.
AND CANDIES.
AND CAKES.
AND BREAD.
AND OTHER good things to eat.
AND THAT ended.
MY GOOD time for me.
AND I tried.
TO COP some of them.
AND THERE was nothing doing.
AND I hung around.
UNTIL IT was time to go home.
AND IT was no use.
AND I dreamed.
OF ALL those things last night.
AND WHEN I got home.
AND HAD gotten into bed.
TWO LADIES called up.
AND WANTED to know.
WHAT WAS the matter.
WITH THIS column yesterday.
AND I told them.
AND THEY told me.
THAT THEY'D appreciate it.
IF I stayed home.
AND I told them.
"I THANK you!"

Home Cure for Hay Fever.
At last the great problem has been solved—how to have hay fever without being rich. Fred Bailey, barber, discovered the cheap cure. It is just an accident. Fred went into the big cooler at the Hartford City Ice Company's plant and when he came out he found that his hay fever was greatly relieved. He kept up the "treatment" for a few days, and now feels that he is almost cured. He spread the good news and now the cooler at the ice plant is the mecca for hay feverers. There they can order with perfect impunity and no additional drug on their pocketbooks the gentle breezes from the artificial icebergs.—Indianapolis News.

Better Farm Implements
WE MEAN EVERY WORD OF THIS
The next time you drive to town with a load, just take note of the road. Wherever you find a rut the pulling is hard and slow and the vitality of your team is sapped away. Ruts in a road are bad things to encounter—they don't pay.
And poor, out of date implements and machinery are to the farmer what the rut is to his team. They are bad things to oiling to—they don't pay.
If you want increased profits from the soil, new machinery and better implements will produce them, and with less labor and cost.
If you want the RIGHT implement or piece of machinery at the RIGHT price, we will sell it to you.
If you want to look them over, come and do so. We will afford you every opportunity and facility.
If you want additional information—want to know what they will do for you—come and ask questions. We will tell you. Come now.
Read Carefully the List Below and Then Let us Show them to You.
