MORE STRIKE TALK.

It seems that the country has not yet escaped the possibility or probability of a railroad strike, nor indeed did close students of economic affairs believe that such was the case when the Adamson law was passed. That law is to be tried in the courts, and not until the highest tribunal in the land has passed upon it will it be known just what its ultimate effects are or will be. At Cleveland, Ohio, a few days ago one of the chiefs of a railroad men's union said that no matter what the decision of the supreme court may be in regard to the Adamson law there will be a strike unless the railroads meet the demands made upon them when the controversy first arose and instituted an eight-hour day on January 1st. This, however, may be only a prediction of a threat, for the railroad men accepted the law in the spirit in which it was offered and certainly if it is upheld by the courts the men nor the roads can do otherwise than accept it. A new difficulty appears to have arisen, however, in the interpretation of the law, or the application of it to the existing system of payment. Either the system will have to be changed voluntarily or the law will have to be amended to make such a change mandatory. The prospect, to say the least, is not encouraging.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

The Presidential campaign is over. It was fought with unusual vigor and with much unnecessary bitterness, says Manufacturers' Record.

"The American people have now recorded their verdict, and it is incumbent upon the defeated to join with the victors in a broad spirit of patriotism for the betterment of the country. This does not mean that anyone should put aside his convictions of right and wrong, or that the people should change their views on fundamental economic questions.

"It does mean, however, that patriotism should come to the front and, putting aside all bitterness, should recognize that the nation is greater than any party, and that the dangers which we face will demand the highest statesmanship and patriotism of men of all parties.

"The issues before us are world-wide in their sweep. We are in the mightiest, the most momentous epoch in the last nineteen hundred years, and we should realize that we are 'living in an age on ages telling.'

"We must broaden our thinking, we must face world changes, and seek the path of duty rather than the path of ease and comfort, hoping that the same path leads to both, but willing to do our duty and leave the consequences to the Ruler of the Universe.

"We are prone to love ease, prone in individual and national life to prefer comfort to duty if duty interferes with comfort, prone to soothe our conscience and trust that all will be well even if we are burden-shirkers instead of burden-bearers. If we would quit ourselves like men, that spirit must be conquered, and we must be ready to meet the world problems that world conditions have developed.

"All our statesmanship will be needed to guide us in such times as these, and therefore partisanship should end and co-operation now be given by men of all parties."

THE WEST IS CERTAINLY "IT."

Having recovered their equilibrium with a counting of the belated returns, and having discovered that Mr. Wilson instead of Mr. Hughes won the presidential election last Tuesday, the eastern newspapers have begun to realize that the political destinies of this nation no longer rest with the New England states—that these states are no longer the whole of this country—but that the south and west are pretty nearly the whole thing now. But it is to the Western states that the greatest glory goes. "The cash-register patriotism of New York has been spat upon by a virile American West that is keeping the faith of the fathers," is the way the New York World puts it in summing up the effects of the final returns, and none of the eastern newspapers so far seen has a different view, although perhaps not so vigorously expressed. For instance, the Philadelphia North American, the former Bull Moose organ which lined up with the regulars and urged the election of the Hughes tickets, sees it this way:

"This is the tremendous fact of the election. The geographical division which has existed, with minor modifications from time to time, since the days of the civil war, has been changed, or rather has been extended. The great states of the east, the north and the middle west, with their vast populations, no longer decide. The control has been wrested—for the time being, at least—by the joining of the west with the south. This made the Republican loss of Ohio of vital importance.

"And this, of course, reveals a fact of not less importance—the exercise of the balance of power by the Progressive voters of the country. Without their aid the Republicans could not win. In the east, where the overshadowing issue of Americanism ruled, the union was so nearly complete that Republican victory was assured in the middle west, too, where it had been doubtful how widespread was the understanding of the pernicious meaning of Wilsonism, Progressives subordinated everything else to what they deemed a patriotic duty.

"But the west remained sternly and uncompromisingly Progressive. It was impatient of emphasis upon issues relating to the war and preparedness; it was not aroused to the vital importance of maintaining national rights; its attention was concentrated upon domestic problems. I compared Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes, therefore, as possible representatives of Progressive idea solely, and decided that the record of the present administration gave better promise than the pledges of Mr. Hughes, shadowed as they were by his persistent association with the most odious leaders of Republican reaction and Toryism."

The New York World, although published in the metropolis and having the greater portion of its tremendous circulation in those states which have hitherto flattered themselves that they held the political destinies of the nation in their hands, exults over the result in the following language:

"The West has indeed spoken, and nothing better has happened in a generation than this shifting of the political balance to a section which still maintains the old ideals of the Republic, which is not

Shun Mental Darkness.

Fear for the future is the most harrowing and the most unsatisfactory frame of mind possible. The mind gives over to worry is constantly occupied, for it is easy to find things to worry about, once you start looking for them. But with all its constant occupation, it accomplishes nothing, except destruction. Fear and worry are powers for ill and should be avoided and shunned from the outset. We should not allow worry to enter into our thoughts, for once it is given admission to the mind it rapidly takes entire possession.

owned by its pocketbook and which has never made a god of its bank account. To elect a President without the sordid assistance of New York and the hardly less sordid assistance of Illinois would be a double triumph. Even to lose the Presidency by a small margin in such circumstances would be a moral victory that Mr. Wilson could always remember with pride. Whether he wins or loses in the final count of the States that will decide the result, his leadership has wrought a mighty political revolution in the United States. The cash-register patriotism of New York has been spat upon by a virile American West that is keeping the faith of the fathers.

"That in itself is a smashing victory for American democracy and The World welcomes it as the beginning of a new political era in the United States."

The Town Gossip

I WENT down
TO AURORA yesterday,
AND TOOK in the fair,
AND HAD a big time,
EVEN THOUGH my wife
WAS WITH me,
AND WHEN we got there,
THE FIRST person we saw,
WAS MR. John Chapin,
AND HE asked us,
TO HAVE dinner with him,
AND WE did,
AND IT WAS SOME dinner,
AND A little later,
I SAW Ben Thompson,
AND HE said,
HE WANTED me,
TO TAKE dinner with him,
AND I had to decline,
AND TELL him,
THAT I'D already had some,
AND I started,
TO ASK him,

TO WRAP up something,
SO WE could get it,
GOING BACK on the train,
BUT I thought,
I'D better not,
AND THE fair was fine,
AND THERE was one show,
WHERE a lot of girls,
LET YOU dance with them,
IF YOU paid,
FIFTEEN CENTS per dance,
AND I watched them,
FOR A while,
AND STARTED to dance,
WITH ONE myself,
BUT I thought,
I'D BETTER not,
AND YOU never can tell,
HOW NEWS will spread,
AND THE exhibits were fine,
AND SO WAS,
EVERYTHING ELSE,
AND I had to leave,
AT FOUR o'clock,
AND EVERY seat,
IN THE train was taken,
WHEN I got in,
AND I stood up,
IN THE aisle,
AND KEPT bouncing,
AGAINST A lady,
IN THE seat,
AGAINST WHICH I was leaning,
AND SHE got mad,
BUT SHE didn't get up,
AND I had,
TO KEEP on standing,
AND THAT'S all,
I THANK you.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys
if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.
