On Dining With a Friend.
And I said to myself with a sigh that there were not left in all the world three men, the thought of dining with whom could yield me an equal joy. That is, I maintain, the crucial test of friendship. Do you like to dine with him? Not without a deep meaning was of old the life of a man held sacred with whom one had shared bread and salt. The sacramental rite of ancient hospitality persists under our less simple and less beautiful forms. Nor may we violate it with impunity, barbarians as we are; nature cries-out against our performing this act with one whom we dislike, mistrust, or even toward whom we are indifferent. In a word, I had rather make love to a woman who affects me with a physical repulsion than dine with a man I don't like.—Michael Monahan in the Phoenix.

Old Underground Passage.
A crofter of Kilmanneth, Tiree Scotland, made a discovery of an underground passage while plowing his land the other day. The plow struck what appeared to be a large stone, and on making investigation he found that this was part of the roof of a subterranean passage. He followed the underground roadway to a length of about twenty-eight yards. The roof is securely though roughly built, and does not seem to be either the end or the beginning of the passage. The part where the discovery was made is about a mile from the shore, and the land belongs to the duke of Argyll.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

A few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur brings back its vigor, color, gloss and thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mix the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not a fault, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.
