LOCUST TO INFEST WESTERN COUNTIES

The song of 17-year locusts will drone through wooded areas in northwestern North Carolina this summer.

Grubs which have been living under the ground since 1918 will crawl up onto trees this year to shed skins and emerge as winged insects.

The locusts will appear in wood lots by the million; the males, filling the air with their steady droning. However, the insects do very little damage, says Dr. Z. P. Metcalf, head of the entomology department at State College.

Occasionally they do injure young fruit trees which have been set out in new ground by laying eggs in the twigs. This can be prevented by covering the trees with mosquito netting or tobacco cloth, Dr. Metcalf points out.

The locust infestation this year will occur in Alleghany, Surry, Wilkes, and Yadkin Counties, the mountains of West Virginia and Southwestern Virginia, he adds.

Since the department of entomology is dependent upon local observers in the affected areas for information regarding the locusts, Dr. Metcalf has requested that interested persons send him information about the insects.

Specimens of the locusts will also be appreciated, he stated. Specimens may be mailed in pasteboard boxes to the Entomology Department, State College, Raleigh, N. C.

Locusts will be found most numerous in rich woodlands which have not been cut or burned over recently, he said, but will also occur in other places. They should not be confused with grasshoppers or July flies.

SAYS COTTON TAX IS NOT REDUCING SALES

The processing tax adds only a negligible amount to the price of goods manufactured from cotton, says Dean I. O. Schaub, of N. C. State College.

This slight increase is not appreciably lowering the demand for cotton commodities, he states; in fact, revenue secured from the tax and distributed among farmers is increasing the demand in certain areas.

"Who, for instance, would postpone the purchase of a shirt because of a three-cent increase in its price," the dean asked, "or go without a new dress because the processing tax had raised the price six cents?"

"The tax of four cents a pound on the cotton in an automobile tire surely is not enough to affect the total price noticeably."

"On the other hand, revenue from the tax is distributed to cotton growers in rental and benefit payments, and thus it helps to increase their income."

"Farmers are not only able to buy more cotton goods themselves, and they are significant part of the consuming public, but they also spend more for other things, thereby increasing the purchasing power of the people with whom they trade."

"The general rise of incomes in the cotton states, and in regions which sell manufactured commodities to the cotton states, has also increased the demand for cotton goods."

"Larger bank deposits, greater department store sales, registration of more new automobiles, and increased shipments of industrial goods to the South are a proof of the stimuli given business by the farmers' greater purchasing power."

Plans Being Made Farmers' Week

Farm and Home Week will be held at State College this summer from July 29 to August 2 and the central theme of all discussion will be, "Conservation of Rural Resources."

Under the plans being made, there will be no sectional meetings for men as in the past but all of the time will be taken with general discussions on present day questions. The women will have their regular short course under the direction of Miss Ruth Current and joint meetings of men and women will be held each evening in the Riddick Field Stadium.

Charles A. Sheffield, now at Washington, will continue to act as general secretary of the Farm and Home Week and will return to the college in ample time to make full preparations. He will be assisted by David S. Weaver of the college staff.

At a recent meeting attended by the president and vice-presidents of the Farmers Convention and the State Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs, it was planned to again invite all farm organizations to hold their annual gatherings at the college during the week. There will also be a conference of rural ministers.

Discussions will center about the AAA program, present and future, soil erosion, rural electrification, rural rehabilitation, conservation of forests and wild life, TVA work and the like. It is also planned to have a large number of exhibits and demonstrations.

The evenings will be devoted to dramatics, community sings, games and inspirational addresses. Last year over 5000 men and women attended the Farm and Home Week exercises and it is expected that more than this number will register at the 33rd gathering this summer.

Veterans To Be Given CCC Work

Announcement Made For Immediate Expansion Of Civilian Conservation Corps To Include Veterans Of World War Or Prior Wars

James S. Pittman, manager of the North Carolina Regional Office of the Veterans' Administration, Charlotte, announces receipt of information that the President of the United States has directed the prompt expansion of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to include veterans of either the World War or prior wars; that the Director, Emergency Conservation Work, has authorized the expansion of the Civilian Conservation Corps during the period June 15-August 31, 1935, which will include the normal July replacement program to maintain the Corps at full strength.

Eligibility

He calls attention to the fact that in addition to veterans of the World War, veterans of such wars as the Spanish American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion (or China Relief Expedition) are to be included in the program of expansion as it relates to the Veterans' Contingent, Civilian Conservation Corps; and that applicants therefor must meet the following requirements: (a) service in the armed forces of the United States during war; (b) honorable discharge from such service; (c) veteran is unemployed; (d) veteran is a citizen of the United States; (e) physical fitness and (f) good character.

Mr. Pittman states that while definite figures for the North Carolina quota of veterans are not immediately available, it is contemplated that the number of war veterans to be selected will be from 500 to 600, including both white and colored, and he adds that applications of all veterans permanently residing in North Carolina should be forwarded as promptly as possible to the Manager, Veterans' Administration, Charlotte, N. C.; that applications (Form P-130) must be submitted in duplicate.

Should Apply Now

All veterans who may be interested are reminded of the importance of making inquiries or forwarding their applications at the earliest possible date. The Charlotte office of the Veterans' Administration will give prompt attention to individual inquiries of veterans, by letter or otherwise. However, veterans are cautioned that it would be inadvisable to incur any expense for personal visits to the office of the Veterans' Administration in Charlotte for the purpose of filing their applications, for the particular reason that it is essential that all applications must bear the endorsements of two responsible persons who can vouch for them; and at least one of these signatures should be obtained from an official of an ex-service, welfare or relief organization, and the other should be obtained from a responsible citizen or notary public who is acquainted with the facts upon which applications are based.

May Secure Forms

Upon the other hand, veterans should make their personal contacts with the nearest office of such organizations as The American Red Cross, Public Welfare, County Relief, or any of the veterans' organizations, such as The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans of the World War and The United Spanish War Veterans, as well as the National
