Bear Story
While other folks are having rumors of bears it seems to be more than rumors here. The first one was seen one day about three weeks ago when Frank Henry Marshburn, local colored man, was returning home from a visit to his sister. In order to make the trip in less time he decided to go an old road which is used very little and goes through what is known as Alligator Swamp. As Frank Henry was quietly walking along who should he meet but Mrs. Bruin. Not being prepared for a battle with such an enemy there was nothing he could do but give her "right of way". There has been no interview with Frank Henry but all can guess as to how he respected her right to travel the road which has been somewhat discarded by man.

A few days later Mr. R. M. Maness saw one just a short distance from his home. He tried his luck with his gun but his shot were too small and bruin kept on his way.

But the most exciting incident yet was that of Master Sheldon Edwards, little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Edwards. Last Friday afternoon he heard his brother's small dog barking out in the hog pasture. His boy instinct naturally led him to investigate, so he started out to find the trouble. Before he was quite to the dog he discovered bushes moving and being torn down. It seemed as if bruin was insulted at the pup but Sheldon did not take time to see any more. He said the bear ran and when asked what he did he casually remarked "I only hit the high places."

Mrs. L. L. Edwards and children of Bolivia are visiting here.

OPENS SEASON

Although this is the closed season on quail, they are fair prey if you kill them with your car.

Sanitation Aids In Fly Control

Are The Greatest Known Spreader Of Bacteria and Disease And Also Are Bad For Livestock During The Summer Months

"Declare war on flies if you want to get the best results from your livestock this summer," says Prof. R. H. Ruffner, head of the animal husbandry department at State College.

Flies reproduce at an almost incredible rate, he said, and they are the greatest known spreaders of bacteria and disease. Also, they are a serious annoyance to dairy animals.

The first step in protecting cows from flies is to clean up all places where the flies breed. Remove the piles of manure, refuse, and other unsanitary matter. Keep the stables, poultry houses, and hog pens clean.

All places where manure accumulates should be cleaned out each week and the manure spread on the fields. On dairy farms, the manure should be cleaned up and hauled away daily.

It is advisable to spray horse and mules stables with fly exterminator immediately after each cleaning.

Keeping the work stock in the pasture as much as possible will help the stock and also reduce the accumulation of manure in the stables where flies tend to breed.

Wherever human food supplies, particularly milk and cream, are kept, screens should be provided to keep the flies out, Ruffner stated. He also recommended screens for every farm home.

FARM QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Question:—My hogs seem to be infested with lice. What should I do to control the pests?

Answer:—Grease the pigs with waste oil from the automobile. This will kill lice and other external parasites affecting the animals. However, do not expose the pigs to direct sunlight immediately after greasing them.

Question:—Is it a good practice to plant cowpeas on tobacco land when the crop is "laid by?"

Answer:—It certainly is. The cowpeas will improve the land if plowed under or may be used for a supply of legume hay. The tobacco will not be injured as the bottom leaves will be primed by the time the peas begin full growth. Usually, however, it is best to use the peas for soil improvement and the vines will not make much growth unless the tobacco ripens and is harvested early. Progressive tobacco growers are not afraid to improve their land nowadays because they have found that they can use more plants to the row or balance the fertilizer to take care of the increased fertility supplied by legumes.

Question:—My bean vines are being destroyed by beetles. How can I combat them?

Answer:—Dust with magnesium arsenate. Mexican bean beetles have appeared in large numbers this season and will be very destructive to late snap beans unless control measures are used. The insects may be controlled with a magnesium dust or spray or by using the new Rotenone dust. This latter is being recommended quite generally now because it is non-poisonous to humans but it is more expensive than the magnesium arsenate. If you have only a few rows of beans in the garden, very good results may be secured by picking the adult beetles each day.
