LAKE WACCAMAW IS NOT CLOSED UP NOW

Lake Waccamaw, the Columbus county resort, is not now closed on account of infantile paralysis, and has not been.

Two weeks ago the County Board of Health recommended that the city aldermen of the town of Lake Waccamaw take steps to prevent gatherings of any kind at the Lake on the Fourth and Sixth of July.

However, the aldermen emphatically stated that the Lake would not be closed, inasmuch as they did not deem the epidemic serious enough to justify calling off the recommendations.

The resort town now is reaching the height of its summer season, and is drawing tourists from all sections.

Alleghany County sheep growers co-operated in the regional wool pool in which over 80,000 pounds of wool was sold for 29 cents a pound.

PROJECT APPROVED

The project drawn sometime ago for beautifying Franklin Square has been approved and sent back from Raleigh and the money is expected to be made available in just a short time.

PROPOSE ERECTION OF POWER PLANT ON WACCAMAW RIVER

It would be the idea of the propagators of the plan to have the plant furnish electricity to all the rural districts, and any of the towns which might be interested in having electricity from this source. It remains their belief that the power can be generated cheaply along the Waccamaw, and a subsequent low rate would result.

DISTRESSED BOAT COMES IN SAFELY FOLLOWING STORM

(Continued from page 1.) through a loose exhaust manifold. After coming through the inlet under its own power, the craft was tied up at McGowan's pier at Wrightsville Sound and the men came to the city about 6:00 o'clock.

Boat Tossed About

During the time the boat was at sea, it was tossed about "like a cork" and the two men were forced to stay in the small cabin. Tuesday night the wind, coming from the east and southeast, reached a velocity of 35 miles an hour and increased the size of the mammoth waves. Mr. Woolvin said the rain "came down in sheets" and the distant boom of the Masonboro surf was broken time and again by the roll of thunder. From Tuesday morning until early yesterday "it would have been suicide to have tried to cross Masonboro bar," he declared. He said it was impossible to reach the bow of the small craft after 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. The strain on the anchor, only one he had, was terrific and he was forced to circle the boat to free it. Mr. Woolvin said he and his companion slept for short intervals during the night and that he was asleep when the coast guard patrol boat, Naugatuck, arrived yesterday morning at 5 o'clock from Southport.

"Are you the man who needs help?" the patrol boat captain yelled to him. He replied, "I'm the man, but I don't need any assistance." The Naugatuck stood by as he went through the inlet to Wrightsville Beach. He said the seas had calmed down about 50 per cent at that time.

No Distress Signals

Mr. Woolvin denied that he had raised distress signals. Persons on the beach saw the boat early Tuesday night and called the Southport coast guard station.

He said he and his companion "went outside" Tuesday morning at about 5 o'clock. At about 8 o'clock they started to return but saw passage over the bar would be dangerous. Two more attempts were made and it was then decided to anchor and stay outside until the seas calmed. They donned life preservers and waited.

Tuesday night the waves increased in size. Mr. Woolvin did not run his motor but saved the 18 gallons of gasoline aboard for use if the anchor line broke, forcing him to fight the sea.

The Bobby is not equipped with radio. Mr. Woolvin said he believed persons on the beach thought his running lights were distress signals. At times the bottom of the boat was visible as the seas tossed it up.

Rough Weather

The aviator said he has been "going outside" for 18 years and the weather was the roughest he had ever experienced. Fishermen at Wrightsville told him it was the first time a boat of that size has remained outside in rough weather throughout the night. Waves on the bar, he stated, were as high as two-story houses at times. The depth of the water in which the boat, which draws three feet, was anchored was about 80 feet.

Four fishing crafts attempted to get through the inlet Tuesday night but were unable to brave the huge waves. When he came in yesterday morning, fishing crafts were also on the west side of the inlet.

RECALLED TO LIFE

A monarchist parliament took action on July 10 which restored the rights of citizenship and property to members of Austria's royal family, who for 16 years were exiled from its borders. The action of parliament is considered a definite step toward making Archduke Otto, scion of the Hapsburgs, now living in Belgium, emperor of Austria. Young Otto and his mother, ex-empress Zita, are expected to return soon to take over the estates and revenues which the bill restored to their family.

BOOST SALARIES

County school superintendents in North Carolina will probably have a 20 per cent increase in their pay checks for the next two years, it was decided last Wednesday when the State Board of Education tentatively approved a new salary system. The new pay schedules will be computed on the basis of school enrollment rather than that of average daily attendance as formerly.

PINCHED IN PARIS

The old blurb about Rome and the Romans is a washout, or what we hear about the night life in Paris is untrue—witness the trial of an American girl for nude dancing in restaurants of the French capital. The girl, Joan Warren, 22, danced every night in a Montmartre night club—and in nothing else save white powder and a G-string—until more conservative Parisians grew indignant. On July 11, three venerable judges—bewhiskered, by the way—began a week's deliberation to decide whether Joan's performance outraged public modesty. Meanwhile Joan continues her dancing—before large and enthusiastic audiences.

FLOOD CONTINUES

The Yangtze river, which went on a rampage last week, is still unruly. July 11 saw Nanking dikes crushed and from 2,000 to 3,000 persons killed in an inundation that covered miles of Chinese countryside into a veritable lake. On Monday a toll of 10,000 lives was taken in Honkow as the Han river "joined the party." Military men observed the devastated area from the air, but were powerless to reach survivors marooned on high land.

BIG BUBBLE BURSTS

A stratosphere flight sponsored by the National Geographic society failed to materialize Friday when a 3,700,000 cubic feet balloon burst before the take-off for the projected flight. Officials of the society made no statement as to the suspected cause of the disaster to their plans. They are, however, conducting an inquiry.

TO FLY FOR BLACKS

A news dispatch from France announced Friday that 12 American flyers there will sell their services to Ethiopia in event of an attempt at conquest by Italy. Hal du Berrier, American commercial flyer, heads the dozen mercenaries of the air, with Major Granville Pollock, who served in the Lafayette Escadrille, assisting him. They plan to gather additional airmen in Egypt.

REFUSED FREEDOM

"A laborious and thoughtful study" of the case in question has failed to convince Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina of the innocence of Luke

Lea, the state executive announced Saturday. Friends of Lea had gathered for the governor's inspection "new evidences" calculated to exonerate Lea, who is serving time for the mishandling of Asheville bank funds. Governor Ehringhaus refused the requested pardon.

WIFE FOLLOWS WALEY

Margaret Waley, 19 years old, Saturday heard a jury convict her of violation of the "Lindbergh law", for which her husband, Harmon Waley, has been sentenced to 45 years in Federal prisons. Waley and William Mahan, fugitive from justice, "snatched" 9-year-old George Weyerhauser, heir to timber millions, and held him for ransom. Margaret Waley, who confessed to aiding the kidnapers, will be sentenced today.

KINGFISH KIND

Dictator Huey Pierce Long, of Louisiana, magnanimously decided

Sunday that T. Semmes Walmesley can keep his job, since it no longer carries any authority. Long, who called a special session of his state legislature for the avowed purpose of "de-powering" Walmesley, who is Mayor of New Orleans, and an old enemy of the senator, has succeeded in a big way. Spunky Walmesley refused to resign, although the omnipotent Huey alienated all the Walmesley supporters in the municipal administration.

NOT SERIOUS

An X-ray examination by physicians Sunday disclosed that Kurt Schuschnig, chancellor of Austria, was not seriously injured in the recent automobile accident which spread unease to his supporters. The Fascist leader's automobile left the road near Linz, Austria, the day before, bringing death to his young wife and painful injuries to the Chancellor himself.
