Time

(By Susan Haines Morris) Time, with its very busy tread, Unhindered onward speeds its way;

Swift as the weavers shuttle in its course, Nor life nor death can stop its sway.

We cherish with unceasing care, Regardless of the coming years Things that perish with the hour When we will answer with our tears.

Woven in memory's fabric and deeds undone, In coming days will leave their scars; That time nor tears nor prayers Can ne'er erase those passing hours.

Time flies thru sunshine and through rain, As onward spreads its wings for flight Neither fire nor flood can stay its course, Unceasing thru the wry night.

Beyond the sky where all is love, All fame and time will pass away, And God will reign supremely there Where all is one eternal day.

FARM QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Question:—What was the final vote by North Carolina tobacco growers on carrying on the adjustment program?

Answer:—According to information secured from E. Y. Floyd in charge of the tobacco adjustment program, 130,622 persons voted for continuing the program and 1,432 voted against it. In the larger producing counties the vote was almost unanimous in favor of the program.

Question:—Can I cut my lespeveda for hay and still harvest a crop of seed from the same land.

Answer:—Yes, if you cut the hay early enough. Set the cutter bar high so that the crop can grow out again and the lespeveda will make sufficient growth to produce seed. However, one usually does not secure a commercial crop of seed when a crop of hay has been harvested. Enough seed is produced to reseed the same land or to harvest for use on the home farm.

Question:—I am losing a lot of chickens and I think the trouble is limberneck. The birds lose the use of their necks and become completely paralyzed. What should I do to control this trouble?

Answer:—Apparently your birds are affected with limberneck. This trouble is caused by the birds eating decayed animal or vegetable material which is highly poisonous to them. The best method of approach is to confine the birds until the cause is located and removed. This may be in the form of mouldy or decomposed mash or grain, a dead chicken or rat, or some other animal. It would be well to give the entire flock epsom salts at the rate of three-fourths of a pound to two and one-half gallons of water.
