Brick Brooders Good For Poults

Five pounds!" exclaimed a parishioner. "Is that all the squire is giving to the Church Fund? Why, he ought to give 50!" "As," said the vicar gently. "I except he just forgot the ought!" Smith: "You seem to have a bad cold, old man. What are you doing for it?" Brown: "Today I'm doing what Craig told me to do. It's Jones' day tomorrow, and the next day 'is Hidenheimer's. If I'm not better by Sunday, and if I'm still alive, I will try your remedy. Will you please put it on the memo-pad?"

Extension Poultry Specialist Says That Brick Brooder Gives Better Results Than Hen Or Turkey

"A brick brooder has it all over a turkey or chicken hen in raising poults," said C. F. Parrish, extension poultry specialist at State College. A hen can be used successfully in small flocks, he added, but unless great care is exercised, the losses will be heavy. Either way, he continued, the young turkeys should not be allowed to range on ground with older birds or where adult turkeys or chickens ranged the year before. Where a brick brooder and a brooder house are used, both should be cleaned thoroughly and moved to a new location not used by poultry or turkeys during the past two years. The brooder should be operated in about the same manner as for chicks. Start the brood with a temperature of 95 to 100 degrees where canopy brooders are used, or a room temperature of 75 to 80 degrees when brick brooders are used. Reduce the temperature gradually. After six or seven weeks, depending on the weather, the heat can be discontinued. Poults are the least intelligent of fowls, and must be taught where to eat and drink and where to find warmth. Liquid milk makes a good food for the first feedings. The first solid food may be oatmeal flakes, Johnny cakes, boiled eggs, corn-bread crumbs, bread soaked in milk with the surplus milk squeezed out, or other such palatable feedstuff. If these feeds are used, they should be mixed with fresh, tender, green feed chopped fine. Start feeding a good balanced ration, with plenty of protein, as soon as possible. Some growers prefer to start the poults right away with a regular baby chick starter.

Sanitation For Plant Disease

Rigid sanitation will aid farmers in checking the spread of tobacco mosaic, disease that costs North Carolina farmers millions of dollars every year. The organisms that cause mosaic are often found in tobacco that has been prepared for smoking or chewing, and they can be transferred easily to young plants in the field or seed bed. "Don't carry any tobacco in your pockets when you go into a field or seed bed," said Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist at State College. "If you are a tobacco user, brush out your pockets and wash your hands thoroughly with soap and water." Dr. Shaw also urged growers not to transplant any plants that show symptoms of mosaic. For the first four to six weeks after transplanting, the field should be gone over before each cultivation and all diseased plants removed and destroyed, he says. Cultivators, harness, men's shoes, and other equipment may spread mosaic over the field. Always cultivate or top healthy plants before working with those that have mosaic symptoms. Dr. Shaw pointed out that black can also be spread by workstock, equipment, or men moving from one field to another, especially when the soil is wet. Black shank can also be spread by rain water washing from a diseased field on to another just below. On farms where black shank has been found, don't use tobacco trash in fertilizer, and don't use manure from the stalls of animals that have ranged on infested ground. More than 3,500 blood-tested baby chicks were purchased in Jones county this spring as a result of demonstrations by the assistant county agent.

Many Eligible For Pensions

The Following Article Was Written With Idea Of Clearing Up Certain Misunderstandings Which Have Occurred in This Connection Raleigh.—There are thousands of North Carolinians who will be eligible for aid under provisions of the Old Age Assistance Act, passed by the 1937 General Assembly, and there are many more who will not be able to meet the requirements for various reasons. The State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, anxious to make clear provisions of the Old Age Assistance plan, which becomes effective on July 1, of this year, has issued a statement tending to clarify the Act. One of the first requirements is that applicants for aid under the plan shall be citizens of the United States, either native-born or naturalized. Another essential is that applicants shall be 65 years of age or over, and shall not have sufficient income, or other resources, to provide a reasonable subsistence compatible with decency and health. Many persons reaching the age of 65 have not been able, frequently through no fault of their own, to save sufficient money to care for themselves in the declining years of their lives; others, because of age or disabilities, are unable to earn a comfortable livelihood, while still others are not so situated that they can care for themselves. Applicants for assistance under the Act are not supposed to be inmates of any public institution at the time applications are filed. However, they may apply for aid which, if allowed, will not be inmates of public institutions. In order to prevent possible fraudulent applications for assistance under the Old Age plan, the law specifically prohibits the assignment or transfer of property during the two years prior to the filing of applications. Another requirement which will be rigidly adhered to is that all applicants must have been residents of North Carolina for at least five of the nine years preceding the filing of the applications, and for one year immediately preceding the filing. There is an additional stipulation, in view of the fact that the 100 counties of the State are participating in the financial aspects of the Act, that applicants must have been residents of the county in which the applications are filed for at least one year. This, however, in cases where county residence has been of shorter duration, has been cared for by a clause in the law which provides that approved applicants shall receive full benefits, with the difference which would have been absorbed by the county coming from the State appropriation. Instances of this character will be passed upon by the State Board. Amounts to be paid applicants will be determined upon individual conditions, and will not exceed $30 per month, or $360 per
